

PRISONER HURT
IN CITY JAIL

Eric Aho Slightly Injured by Falling Out of Bunk—Other Offenders

Eric Aho, a logger who was arrested last evening by Officer Richardson, fell from his bunk in the city jail last night, cutting a deep gash in his head. Some trouble was evidenced in procuring a doctor to attend to the injured man, but finally Dr. Horsfall was secured and took several stitches in Aho's head. After treatment he was removed to his cell where he remained for the night. In Recorder Butler's court today Aho displayed two black eyes resulting from the fall. Recorder Butler considered that he had been punished plenty and released him from custody.

Charles Duncan was arrested by Officer Richardson at 4:45 p. m. on Thursday on a charge of drunkenness. He was fined the usual $5 before Recorder Butler today. He had no money and the fine was charged to his account.

Bert Keyser was arrested at 2:10 p. m., Thursday by Officer Carter. He was released today, the usual fine of $5 being marked against him.

Paddle Coin, a logger employed in the Smith-Powers camps was arrested on Thursday afternoon by Officer Shoupe on a charge of drunkenness. He was fined $5 before Recorder Butler today. Coin has been arrested before on the same charge.

Officer Gordon Smith filed a complaint against parties performing construction work on Central avenue, for allowing a rail to lay stretched across the street without lights. A formal charge will be filed against the parties today.

PERKINS MAKES GOOD.

Former Marshfield Catcher Shows Up Well With Portland.
Rosecoe Fawcett of The Oregonian, in writing his account of Tuesday's game of McCredie's Coast Leagueers at Santa Cruz with the Colored Giants in which Portland won six to two, gives Floyd Perkins of Gardiner, who caught for Marshfield last year, the following boost:
"Perkins' second good showing behind the windpad, together with Walter Doane's third field day at bat, were other noteworthy developments of the afternoon.
"Catcher Perkins looks better every time he is trotted out for scrutiny. He has a dandy arm, and had Kores covered third properly Floyd would have nipped every attempt at theft."
"The twenty-year-old catcher banged out a two-base hit, too, in the pinch, and drove in one of Portland's three runs in the seventh inning. Singles by Doane and Kores and doubles by Perkins and Hanson clinched the game in that stanza."

ASK SENATOR
TO AID JETTY

Oregon Senator May be Requested to Urge Appropriation for Coos Bay

An appeal to Senator Chamberlain to try and insert an appropriation in the Rivers and Harbors bill to provide for starting the reconstruction of the north Jetty of Coos Bay will probably be made soon. The matter has been under consideration by some prominent Coos Bay men and they are hopeful that it may be accomplished. While the Rivers and Harbors bill has passed the House, the new item for the Coos Bay Jetty can be inserted in the Senate and then be put up to the House in the Conference Committee report. Chamberlain, as acting chairman of the Senate committee on the bill, can do this if sufficient pressure is brought to bear on him and as he is now facing a campaign for re-election, it is believed that he would be quick to respond. The size of the appropriation to be asked is a problem, but most favor sufficient to carry on the work for two years, when another Rivers and Harbors bill will be up.

WIRE FROM HAWLEY.

Congressman Hawley wired the Coos Bay Port Commission, W. U. Douglas and others here today that the House had passed the Rivers and Harbors bill with an item for $50,000 for maintaining the bar dredge, another of $3000 for Coos River and also a provision for a new survey of the inner harbor. It is also believed that the $90,000 for the Coquille work was retained. Mr. Hawley's wire was as follows:
"Rivers and Harbors bill just passed House carrying $50,000 for Coos Bay, $3000 for Coos River and provides for a survey for deeper water from Smith's mill to entrance."

AUTOS FOR POLICE

OAKLAND, Cal., March 27.—The old days of the "Wild and Woolly West," now gone forever, are recalled by Oakland's latest addition to its police force. Six automobiles have been bought for the use of the patrolmen in the outlying districts. Two men travel in each, and across the knees of one of them rest a sawed-off shotgun, the same style of missile that was carried by the express messengers of the early days, when thousands of dollars of gold dust was shipped by stage from the mining districts. In each car is a rapid-fire machine gun, a full hospital equipment and portable fire extinguishers, besides everything else that a policeman might need in an emergency.
The new autos, which are used only at night, cover fully ten times the territory that the mounted men formally covered and do it more efficiently. Several Eastern cities, including Chicago and Pittsburgh, have police experts here to see how the system works.

ADVERTISING.

TALK about the value of advertising. Where would Coca Cola be but for the advertising its clever proprietors conducted?
The statement of the company dealing in this commodity shows that the capital was $50,000 and has been maintained at that figure and that with such a capital the surplus and profit and loss balance together are $8,900,000. HYDRANT TESTS
SHOW DEFECTS

Fire Department Will Enter Protest About Poor Water Pressure

Engineer Gordon Smith of the Marshfield Fire Department has been making a test of the pressure of the fire hydrants within the city limits and reports that many are from twenty to thirty-five pounds under the required pressure. On a test of five hydrants, which in the aggregate should have a pressure of 300 pounds, a pressure of only 175 pounds was shown. The Coos Bay Water company contract with the city calls for a pressure of 60 pounds to the hydrant and the hydrants are paid for by the city on this supposition. It is expected that a formal protest will be made by the fire department against paying the water company for sixty pound pressure hydrants when only half pressure is in the mains.

CAPT. MACGENN
IN LIGHTER MOOD

Marine Poet of Pacific Coast Courts Muse in Portland Grill Room

Capt. Macgenn, of the Breakwater, was temporarily turned from his great poem Mark Anthony, and in a less serious mood has ridden his Pegasus from Mount Parnassus to a Portland grill room where he found inspiration for the following bit of verse which is not without its pallidness and moral.
The following is the poem:

THE BALD HEAD

And Macgenn's Observations in the Perkins Grill.
He came early and sat in the corner
And said, "there is no rush, I will wait."
And when the young brunette came over,
He was trying to fix up a date
He told her she was a "good looking,"
And the latest style fitted her well,
And if she would go to the show
with him
And the rest which he never would tell.
The rest was a very late supper
And a taxicab out to his home
For his wife had gone off to the country
And it's h— to be living alone.

He said he was only forty;
He was wrinkled with worry and care,
For his wife had the Devil's own temper—
With carbolic she ruined his hair,
He was longing for love and affection
And for something young, tender and good;
For he married a skinny old widow
And he never was understood.

He told her she should not be working
So hard for a bare living wage;
That her good looks commanded a banker;
She could take leading parts on the stage.
Well, he told her the same old story,
She'd heard it a hundred times over
For she was a tactful young lady
She had fooled many bald heads before.

He wouldn't take no for an answer,
And set the appointment for eight,
And by chance if she wasn't quite ready,
He would stand out on Fifth street
and wait.
He waited and watched and he waited
He was wet from his head to his shoes;
But when she went past with the Pursar
He walked slowly home with the blues.

So it's h— to be fooled by the young ones,
And it's h— to be getting old;
But it's better to be a strong "has-been,"
Than to be left standing out in the cold.

The poet wants something that's forty,
That's strict up to date and alive;
But if she's a student of Shakespeare
He might stand a girl forty-five.
But the Lord steer him clear of the young ones
Who go out when he has to stay home.
He would rather read Rolling and Gibbon,
And how great Alaric took Rome.

Well it's just as the poet saw it,
Its poetry and more it is true;
It is the old ones that ruin the young ones—
Did it ever occur to you?

Baseball Committee Favors A. J. Mendel, Geo. Rotnor and Hugh McLain

THE CALL OF THE GAME.
Yea, the sun is once more shining,
And our hopes are on the wing;
We will soon be listening gladly
To the blue birds as they sing.
Telling us in tuneful warble
That they're brought the joyful spring.
Then we'll sit upon the bleachers
Neath the sun with other spectators
Several hundred howling creatures
Making all the walkin' ring.
Oh, His Umps the plate is dusting,
And we hear his shout "Play Ball!"
On his eyes, his brain, his gait;
And we'll feel the joy of winning,
Or defeat's depressing pall.
With the fans we soon will mingle,
All our pulses in a tingle
Shrieking for a bunt or bingle
Can't you hear the bleachers call?

Yea, the sun again is shining
And the springtime's on the way;
All the teams are talking play,
Of the imported and the jay;
And they're limbering stiffened
muscles,
For the coming opening day
Far above the holdouts stalling
We can hear the coaches bawling,
We can hear the bleachers calling—
We can hear his umps yell
Play!"

Much has been done by the committee appointed by the Marshfield baseball fans to interview the business men of Marshfield with a prospect of securing the consent of three men to supervise the working of the manager of the Marshfield baseball club for the past year.

Already the committee has secured the services of Hugh McLain, who has consented to act with two others and manage the finances of the ball club for the coming season. George Rotnor is also considered the matter of accepting, and A. Mendel will in all probability consent to act. The committee of I. R. Tower, Ben Chandler and Robert Dillard are to meet this afternoon with a view of completing arrangements with Mr. Rotnor and Mr. Mendel to act with Mr. McLain.

Should this trio be appointed by the fans they will appoint a manager and his work will be directly under the committee. Many who have declined the management previous to this time would accept under the new proposed arrangement, as a feeling of security would be evidenced by the manager with a committee of business men at his back.

It is presumed that the manager will consult with Warner Ogren and take over the affairs and books of last season. No more suggestions have been made as to who will make the team this year. The next suggestion it is believed will come from the meeting of the ball fans at the next meeting.

TO BONDON IN WAGON.

G. H. Smith Family Move to Coos County in Pioneer Style.

The Eugene Register says: "G. H. Smith and family left yesterday for Bandon, near Coos Bay, where they will reside in the future. They will travel the entire distance in a wagon drawn by a span of mules and expect to enjoy the trip as they would a summer outing, if the weather is not too severe."

Mr. Smith came to Eugene from Bandon six years ago. He owns a summer resort on the beach, and he will develop the property and be ready for the summer tourist business when the new railroad reaches that section of the state. He owns other property there and will engage in the real estate business.

The household goods of the family were shipped by rail to Portland and thence by water to Bandon.

DISCOURAGE SUNDAY FUNERALS
Steps Taken to Adopt Method Followed in Eastern Cities
For some time past there has been a feeling on the part of the undertakers of Marshfield that funeral takers on Sunday should be discouraged. Fred Wilson, speaking for himself and Mr. Dugan, urged the ministers of Marshfield, and he stated that the livemen were opposed in favor of doing away with the busy day, and on this account the funerals in Eastern cities, the custom of having funerals on Sundays has almost entirely disappeared.

In pursuance with these suggestions, the ministers of Marshfield held a special meeting on Monday at the Presbyterian Church, and by unanimous vote, heartily expressed the views of Mr. Wilson and his associates. Sunday is the minister's busy day, and while he stands ready to give his extra time where the situation urgently demands it, yet in many cases a funeral has been delayed for a day or two so as to have it held on Sunday.
