THE FIRST EASTER DAY.

Never so sweet a hush
In all Judean nights,
Never so fair a sun
Rose o'er Judean heights,
Never so hovering close
Did all of heaven lean,
As when approached the tomb
The weeping Magdalene.

What marvel greets her eyes!
Tear bedimmed are they!
Behold no portal barred—
The stone is rolled away!
Vacant the sheltering depth
Where he was laid to rest;
Vacant the narrow space
Whereon his body preat.

Only the cements white
Where he, the Son, had lain;
Only at head and foot
The guardian angels twain—
The guardian angels twain—
Of gentle mien and grave,
To speak of word fulfilled,
Of him who died to save.

How spread the mighty truth!
How all the earth divided!
What glorious promise kept
The Saviour of mankind!
And so the world is glad
And men, rejoicing, pray,
As did his servants when
Came the first Easter day.
—Stanley Waterloo.

busy housewife with five children. Who was to blame? Undoubtedly, in the first place, his mother and sisters, but in this particular family it did seem to me that the wife could have given the man a post-graduate course in waiting on himself. He was in possession of his full quota of fingers; in fact, he prided himself on being very handy with tools. Surely anyone who can put in place a screw can put studs into a shirt. However, his mother had encouraged him to think he could not and his wife had continued in the same foolish course.

There is absolutely no reason why a man, except when unusually tired, should not wait on himself. It is all a matter of home training. I have known, and doubtless you have, too, a frail little mother to wait hand and foot on several big husky sons and a husband. One of the boys, perhaps, would start out of the house and you would hear, "Oh, mother, I have forgotten to get a handkerchief," and then he stops and looks expectantly at the mother. Over and over again, to my disgust, have I seen these same mothers trot upstairs and bring down the handkerchief or the scarf, or whatever else was wanted. Because the mother was a willing slave the men of the family never thought of her being tired or that they should save her steps.

It is a queer fact, and to my mind, a sad one, that a person who is very unselfish and self-sacrificing usually seems to be the means of making those around them selfish. Teach your small boy to help you and train him to see the little things that he can do for you and his sisters as well as wait on himself. Also, all boys should be taught how to prepare a simple meal. I have known men, who, although they might be fashionable, apparently did not seem to know how to go about cooking potatoes or meat or making tea and coffee.

Especially in homes where no help is kept and where the mother or wife is the only adult woman in the house, men should acquire a little simple housekeeping knowledge. Then if mother is detained, when away, a little longer than she planned, it is a mighty comforting thing for her to know that she will find on her return that the meal has been started. When she is ill or alling this knowledge on the part of the men is still more valuable.

"It won't make a 'slay' of your boy to teach him some of these things and his future wife will rise up and call you blessed some day."
