DELAY KINNEY PROPERTY SALE

Not Likely That Court Can Order Sale for Some Months—Some Problems

The Kinney property tangle will not be cleared up as early as was expected, but it is hoped to advance it to the stage where the court can order the sale of the property some time this summer. E. L. Bryson, attorney for Receiver Watters, was in Marshfield yesterday and stated that he had planned to devote practically his entire time to the matter now until it is completed. In the last suit there was a slight error that will cause some delay. The description of the Kinney property is considerably different from that shown by the official records of the county. Receiver Watters and Bryson worked it all out by tracing the different deeds, the return of properties, etc., and had it in shape. In the last suit this description was to have been used, but instead, through a clerical error, the official county list or description of the property was used. Now an amended complaint will have to be filed. In addition to this, there was a little delay in a misunderstanding between Sheriff Gage's office and Judge Hammond's office relative to service of suit and nearly two months were lost. Another parcel of Kinney property has also been discovered and that is his interest in a certain part of Boulevard Park which was deeded to the Bennett Trust Company as security. This will have to be included in the action before the court can order the sale of the property. Much of this can be done while the appraisers are fixing the value on the various parcels of property. The Kinney affairs are an intricate web and it is a slow, difficult process to straighten them out, but Messrs. Watters and Bryson think they have them in good shape now. It may be that the matter can be advanced so that some of the property can be ordered sold this summer, but it is not certain.

PLAN TO MOVE OLD WAREHOUSE

Smith Company Starts Difficult Feat With Alliance Building

Work has been started on a difficult feat in making a right of way through the Alliance warehouse for the Southern Pacific. It was originally planned to cut out or tear down the portion of the warehouse on the right of way but later it was decided by the C. A. Smith Company to move a section of the building. The warehouse was built first as a shed over the old ship yards, a public subscription being taken to raise funds for it as an aid to the ship carpenters. The timbers extend down into the earth and in order to move it the siding and supports have to be sawed off and placed on stringers. In all, ninety feet of the warehouse is to be moved sixty feet west. This will be about eighteen feet beyond the present dock line but piling will be put in for the foundation there and it will bring the warehouse out almost to the harbor line. The west end of the warehouse will be left standing where it is now. Soon after the east end is moved out to its new location, the Smith company plans to build an addition on the south end to provide adequate warehouse room for the vessels. The moving of the big building, ninety feet long and about eighty feet wide will be watched with interest as it will probably be the most difficult feat of the kind ever attempted in Marshfield.

HOT TIME ON ROAD ELECTION

Lively Controversy Expected at Coquille Next Monday Over Fund Division

Next Monday is likely to witness a lively session of the Coos county court over the Good Roads bond election. There is a decided difference of opinion among some of the good roads boosters about the matter and it will be threshed out at length. Some of the Coquille Valley boosters now take the position that the $450,000 bond issue is sure of defeat if it is parcelled out as some of the Good Roads Association members wanted it, and are planning, it is said, to ask the county court in the order for the election to specify that the money shall be used on one trunk line, the Coos county part of the Myrtle Point-Roseburg route. They say this will give the bond issue a chance of carrying. However, the Ten Mile and North Bend contingents are insistent that the election be called as petitioned and that $70,000 be set aside for the Ten Mile Road. The Ten Milers, headed by Chas. St. Denis, will have a big delegation there and North Bend will also have a delegation. A. G. Isaab, Mayor Simpson, Chas. Winsor, Dr. Bartle, H. C. Diers, V. C. Gorst, C. M. Byler, Geo. D. Mandigo, Fred Hollister, J. H. Greves, M. E. Everitt, P. N. Reberg, Peter Loggie, N. C. McLeod and others have been appointed to attend.

HOW TO GET RID OF DANDELIONS

Mow the Lawns Close and Spray With Sulphate of Iron.

From "The Back Yard Farmer," by J. Willard Bolte, published by Forbes and Company.

Dandelions are the greatest enemy of good lawns in many sections, and they can be completely eradicated if taken in hand early enough. The only sure way to get rid of these pestiferous weeds is to keep them mowed close to the ground during their blooming season and spray the lawn with a solution of sulphate of iron. The constant mowing will prevent the majority of the blossoms from seeding, but the dandelion is a cunning plant, and after its tall blossoms have been cut off four or five times it will begin to send out blossoms that lie close to the ground, below the reach of the lawn mower. These later blossoms and the everlasting plants themselves, will do the damage and make all your mowing useless unless you spray them with the solution mentioned. This sulphate of iron comes in the form of a powder, and can be bought at any seed or drug store at a cost of about five cents a pound. Dissolve a pound in a gallon and a half of water, and spray the entire lawn with it while the sun is hot. The solution will kill the dandelions, but will not harm the grass. If one application does not finish the job, repeat until the dandelions are exterminated. The liquid may be sprayed from an ordinary sprinkling can, but a regular spray pump is much more effective, as it sends out fine mist, which covers the foliage completely.

Announcing Church Benefit Sales

Its Origin: Back in the early 80's a philanthropic London merchant, desiring to assist the many churches, offered a percentage of each day's cash takings to as many churches as there are days in the week. These sales proved of such mutual benefit and were so enthusiastically received that it has since been a yearly event.

Later the well known great retail firm of John Wanamaker of New York and Philadelphia instituted these Benefit Sales in this country and city after city has now taken up this good work that has brought church and merchant closer together.
