SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Color, Lustre and Thickness to Hair When Faded, Streaked or Gray.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.
Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.
Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

Cost of Raising a Dairy Cow

Investigations of the Department of Agriculture Indicate That Farmers in Wisconsin and Districts Where Similar Land and Feed Values Prevail Can Not Afford to Raise a Heifer Calf That is Worth Less Than $60 at Two Years of Age.

WASHINGTON, D. C. April 22.—According to investigators in the Department of Agriculture the average net cost of raising a dairy heifer one year old on a Wisconsin farm is $39.52 and of a two year old heifer $61.41. These figures are applicable to other dairy districts in the North and east where land and feed values are similar to those in Wisconsin. They are based on data obtained from raising 117 calves from birth to the time they enter the dairy herd. The details, with complete summary of the investigation, have recently been published by the Department of Agriculture in Bulletin No. 49, under the title of "The Cost of Raising a Dairy Cow."

There are in the United States over 21,000,000 dairy cows. These figures give some idea of the importance of the economic problem to the country as a whole, for these cows must be replaced every few years. The cost of the production of these heifers is a large item in keeping down the profits of the dairyman.

The new bulletin contains numerous tables and several illustrations of the Jersey calves from which the items of cost were obtained. The most important item was the cost of food, which was estimated at market value and amounted to nearly two-thirds of the total cost of the heifer, while labor formed 12 1-2 per cent of the cost.

Figures for the average net cost of the one-year-old heifer are as follows:

Feed	$24.67
Labor	4.45
Other costs	6.36
Total	$35.48

To this should be added the initial value of the calf, which was estimated to be $7.04, making a total cost at the end of one year of $42.52. This charge is justified in view of the fact that dairy cows are credited with this item in determining the cost of milk production. By allowing $3.00 credit for manure, it leaves a net cost of $39.52 at the end of the first year.

Figures for the average net cost of the two-year-old heifer are as follows:

Initial value	$7.04
Feed	40.83
Labor	7.81
Other costs	13.73
Credit for manure	$69.41
	$8.00
	$61.41

One-half of the feed cost the first year and one-third for the full two years is for whole and skim milk. By far the most expensive period in the life of the calf is the first four weeks, the cost being nearly double that for any other four-week period. This high cost is occasioned by its being dependent almost entirely upon whole milk.

The man labor required in raising a heifer is about 40 hours during the first year and 23 hours the second year. The total cost of man and horse labor for the two years is close to $8. The manure produced during the two years has been valued at $8, consequently, the cost of labor is practically offset by the value of the manure.

The item "Other Costs" consists of expenses usually overlooked in estimating costs. These are interest charge for the use of buildings and equipment, expense for bedding, miscellaneous expenses, a share of the general expense for the entire farm business, and a charge to cover losses by death and discarding. The total for these items nearly one-fifth of the total cost of the two-year-old heifer.

The foregoing figures show that it costs more to raise calves to maturity than is commonly supposed, and they support the advice which the Department is continually trying to impress upon the dairy farmers, that it does not pay to raise any but the best heifers. Raising scrub heifers and selling them at $25 to $40 apiece, as many do, is unprofitable except on cheap land or under other very favorable conditions. But it does pay to raise the best heifers, for in good dairy sections well-bred heifers are worth considerably more than $60 when two years of age. Furthermore, dairy farmers as a rule are obliged to raise their own stock, as it is difficult to buy productive cows at a reasonable price. In some sections of the West where alfalfa is worth only $4 or $5 a ton, or in the Southwest where pastures furnish feed for the greater part of the year, this cost may be greatly reduced. Even where it costs $60 to raise a heifer, two-thirds of this amount is charged for feeds at market prices, a large part of which can be grown on the farm at a profit. Thus by raising the heifers the dairy farmer finds a home market for feeds grown on the farm at remunerative prices, and at the same time aids in maintaining the fertility of the farm.

Only Constant Advertising of an Article Keeps It in the Minds of the People

THE question of who was President Taft's running mate during the last Presidential campaign completely nonplussed 100 business men at the weekly luncheon of the Oakland Rotary Club and incidentally prevented them from winning a prize. It also proved a stumbling block to the propounder of the question, V. O. Lawrence, who himself was found unable to answer it.

"If you want to get results," he was saying, "you must advertise continually. The public forgets. Just to prove this, I will give a prize to any man here who can tell me off-hand who was President Taft's running mate at the last election. I'll venture there isn't a man here who can remember it, although it was a household word with all of us at the time."

A dozen men gave it up. Then someone asked: "Do you know yourself who it was?" Lawrence was obliged to confess:

"I do not. I intended to call up one of the newspapers this morning and find out, but I forgot it."

He won his point, however. No man there could tell.

CITY GIRLS ARE NOT SUITABLE

Summer Man Thinks a Farmer Should Seek a Wife Elsewhere.

Should a young farmer marry a city girl? I think not. Why? Because it is too much like work being a farmer's wife to suit the average city girl. A certain reverend gentleman mentioned in an article all the accommodations of the up-to-date farm, but most certainly he is not speaking of the average. A young farmer with plenty of money, in other words papa's boy, can afford to have any kind of a wife, but the average farmer cannot. He must have a wife he can depend upon to do the work in an emergency.

It is my opinion that a city girl would soon tire of the rough and unaccustomed work of the farm. It is very difficult, if not impossible, to set a hard and cash rule on the matrimonial question. Common sense and true love overcomes many a difficult problem.

The public exhibition of Music and Calisthenics which will be given at the Masonic Opera House, Friday evening by pupils in grades one to seven, is given as a stimulus to better school work. It is purely a business proposition. A definite end makes definite work. No special effort has been made at display. The program will show the regular work of the school. Public singing ought to become a regular feature of the schools work in music, and a great deal better grade of music ought to be handled in the near future. Friday night program is a beginning of a work that the school hopes to improve upon. It is given in the evening in order that the fathers may attend as well as the mothers.

The second part of the program is made up of national lullabies. Some 150 children have a part in this part of the program. They will dress in costumes peculiar to the nation which their lullaby represents.

An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged, the money to be used for the purchase of works of art for the school rooms and for helps in the department of music.

It has been impossible to have every child represented on the program but effort has been made to have every family represented.

Children in grades one to seven who are not on the program will be admitted free.
