FLOWERS AS FOOD.

Candied Violets, Stewed Lilies and Preserved Rosebuds.
The usefulness of flowers as food is but little known in this country, but in many countries they are used as ingredients in many dishes. Rosebuds boiled in sugar and made into a preserve are eaten by the Turkish ladies.

In China the species of lily known to botanists as "thunbergii" is one of the choicest delicacies of the native kitchen. It is dried and used for seasoning regouts and other dishes. The lilies are grown for market in many provinces of China and are usually picked just before they begin to open, then cooked as a fresh vegetable, much as we cook spinach; they have a

A bolt dropped out of the steering gear as she was passing the harbor and it was necessary to drop anchor while repairs were being made. The bolt was replaced within ten minutes and the steamer proceeded on her way up the harbor. The Redondo brought twenty-five cabin passengers and a fair cargo of freight. Among those to arrive were A. B. Daly, J. B. Mills, Mrs. R. K. Booth, N. W. Thompson, Frank Dickman, K. E. Carlson, Carl Morgren, Ed P. Muhlman, N. J. Barnes, Mrs. J. Marnes, Mianie Word, Mrs. Larsen, Bessie Holneck, F. G. Bunch, Mrs. Bunch, John Kizelvan, Axel Matson, Elsie Foster, F. M. Foster, William O'Brien, C. W. Goodman, W. G. Brown, A. Faer, E. DREDGE MICHE REPAIRS MADE

Temporary Repairs Effected to Permit Her to Travel Under Her Own Power

It was stated today that the temporary repairs in the dredge Michie would probably be completed tonight or early in the morning so that the craft might start tomorrow under her own power for Portland where she will be placed on dry-dock for repairs. The extent of the damage cannot be ascertained until she is thoroughly inspected.

No word has been received from Capt. Pendergard of the A. M. Simpson and the extent of the damage to the Simpson is not known.

No further explanation of how the accident occurred is offered, although some are inclined to blame the Michie for anchoring so near the bar. It is said that Captain Reed was acting under orders from Engineer Potter, the expert who was recently here, in anchoring close to the bar. Navigators say that it is wrong to have a vessel anchored there, as there is little space and the currents are uncertain.

most agreeable taste and fragrance. In China dried rosebuds are candied like violets, and so is the jasmine. The common yellow lily growing in ponds and marshes makes a most delicious preserve, and in Turkey it is utilized in preparing a cooling drink. Owing to its flowers having a perfume like that of brandy they are often called by Europeans "brandy bottles."

Candied violets are now a staple product in some parts of France. At Grasse, for instance, in which neighborhood immense quantities of them are grown, all the old and stale violets are sold to the confectionery manufacturers, who steam them, dip them into pans of boiling sugar and sell them at a high price as "confiture of violets."
