Industrial Review of the State

NEW FACTORIES, IMPROVEMENTS AND ENTERPRISES THAT INCREASE THE PAYROLLS AND PROMOTE THE DEVELOPMENT OF OREGON.

SALEM, Or., June 3.—A new law is being initiated to prohibit anyone working over six days out of the seven. It is in charge of a committee of churches and labor unions, and would seriously interfere with employees on street cars, railroads, hotels, restaurants, etc.

The sawmills in Cottage Grove may shut down because they cannot be operated on small margins of profit and meet the demands of the workingmen's compensation and liability laws.

The State Grange adopted a resolution limiting the power of cities to inspect food products, such laws being in the interest of the large trust packing houses.

Portland contractors have a large force executing the Tillamook Bay harbor improvements.

The Workingmen's Compensation act, which strips employers who refuse to come under its operations of all defenses, goes into effect July 1st.

The Moose lodge of Bandon will construct a two-story brick hall 100x100 feet.

The steel work in the new courthouse at Klamath Falls will be made at Portland by the Northwest Steel Co.

The Hudson Placer Mining and Dredging company of Portland and Vancouver, is installing a large plant at Gold Center, seven miles from Sumpter.

Lumber and creosote firms are planning to put down wood block on the Linnton road out of Portland.

The past week the streets of Baker were lighted for the first time from the municipal plant.

Hop growers in convention at Independence Saturday, protested against that industry being put up at a popular vote to be wiped out of existence.

Labor unions are picketing the Home Telephone Company because a man and woman have been employed who are not members of the union, and the company replies that ninety per cent of its business comes from citizens who do not belong to unions.

Things Every Boy Knows

All Boys Have the Same Superstitions Hunches and Omens.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—There's a freemasonry of boyhood that extends from Maine to Oregon and from Michigan to Texas. Nobody passes the signs along, but the young Floridan, and the Iowa youngster have the same superstitions, the same line of hunches and the same good omens as the boys in Utah and New Jersey.

Every boy knows that a snake, mortally wounded at any hour of the day, will not die until the sun sets. That rule has been proved by unskilful reptiles from the lakes to the gulfs.

Another bit of snake lore that the boys all know is that a hair from a horse's tail dropped into a pool of water, will, if given time, develop into a horsehair snake, wriggly and mysterious.

In order to catch a good string of fish in Virginia or Vermont, or anywhere else for that matter, it is only necessary to bait the hook with a nice wriggly angle worm, make a wish and expectorate on the unfortunate bait and place the line in the water. Fish will respond almost immediately.

Mulberries left in water will also develop reptilian tendencies, as boys from time far past have known.

Snake feeders (dragon flies) along streams or in marshes indicate to all boys the imminence of snakes. All insects take warning upon seeing this insect and give the snake which it is attending a wide berth.

A turtle will never let go until it hears the rattling of thunder, though it is possible to fool the tenacious "bird" with a good heavy club and an empty barrel.

Snake feeders (dragon flies) along streams or in marshes indicate to all boys the imminence of snakes. All insects take warning upon seeing this insect and give the snake which it is attending a wide berth.

The subject of luck makes all boys akin. If a horseshoe is found in the road the finder has but to pick it up, make a wish, expectorate lustily upon the horseshoe, hurl it backward over his head and walk away, whistling a tune.

All boys know that it is dangerous to go swimming during dog days, but the period of dog days may be narrowed to suit the natatorial convenience of the individual. In other words the dog days rule may be suspended by a vote of a good sized crowd of youngsters unable to resist the purring lure of the stream.

If one sees a load of hay and makes a wish while it is passing along the road that wish will come true.

The danger from snakes and turtles while swimming does not deter youngsters for it is a well known fact that a snake cannot bite under water, for the simple reason that the minute it opens its mouth to nab the unsuspecting swimmer it chokes. The same rule applies to turtles.

The first star at night is also a fulfiller of wishes if the wish is prefaced with the formula: Star bright, star light, first star I've seen tonight.

Another bit of swimming lore is the remedy of boyhood for water in the ears. A flat sun warmed stone will draw all the water right out of the ear of the boy who seeks relief.

If one wishes to be a hero and conquer the world, he should wear a red shirt and blue trousers.

The universal knowledge of boys extends well into the field of materia medica. A bee sting or an insect's bite may be instantaneously cured by placing the mingled juices of three weeds—any three—upon the discomfited portion of the anatomy.

Every gray horse one sees is an omen of good luck if proper recognition is made. One must wet the tip of the forefinger, touch the palm of the hand and then hit the palm vigorously with the clenched hand.

Ordinary cobweb is generally known to be a means of stopping the flow of blood when the jack knife goes wrong.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

If one has a tooth pulled and will refrain from putting one's tongue in the cavernous vacancy a new tooth, fully crowned in resplendent gold, will grow there.

It is bad luck to kill a frog. Such an act effects the milk of the cow supplying the family of the youngster killing the frog and thus serves to convict the culprit at the dinner table.

The guild of boyhood also promulgates certain rules, calculated to protect the brethren from their foes.

It is a known fact that if one calmly faces the onrushing ram, the ferocious bull or even the belligerent bulldog the animal thus frowned upon will be awed by the bravery manifested and will refrain from the intended attack. A good pair of legs and the nimble knack of climbing a tree or scaling a friendly fence will also serve to save the day in such cases.

A mad dog will not molest one who stands idly at the roadside and looks idly about. And if you ever happen to get caught by a bear the thing to do is to fall over, lie perfectly stiff and hold your breath. The bear will think you're dead, anyway, and what object could he have in killing you?

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Younger! Use Grandmother's Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know The use of Sage Tea and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

A well-known down-town druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply darken a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

MUNICIPAL WHARF. San Pedro Will Have One of the Finest on Pacific Coast.

SAN PEDRO, June 3.—The last piles in the municipal wharf in the outer harbor have been driven by Contractors Snare & Trieste. Representatives of the contractors announce that they expect to complete their contract by July 1st. The wharf will be one of the best on the Pacific Coast, and when the tracks and sheds for the handling of freight are completed, the freight handling facilities will be second to none on the coast. Over 1200 piles were driven by the contractors to support the reinforced concrete wharf. All of the piles are reinforced and have been arranged in such a manner that when the concrete floor and concrete stringers are in place the entire wharf will be a solid piece of concrete.

Manufacturers have found that red alder from the Pacific coast is a suitable material for clothespins. Alder makes a white, smooth, springy pin. As a result of this fact, a clothespin factory, said to be the first on the Pacific coast, may be established at Portland, Oregon.
