THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTH

RALEIGH, N. C., June 10.—A monument to the North Carolina Women of the Confederacy was unveiled here today. It is the second tribute of the South to its women of the Confederacy, a similar monument having been erected by the State of South Carolina. Members of the North Carolina division of United States Veterans and scores of prominent men and women from this and other states witnessed the ceremonies.

The memorial was made possible through the gift from the late Ashley Horne, who served as a Confederate soldier throughout the war between the states. As a member of the state Legislature from Johnston County, he introduced a measure providing for the erection of a statue by the state. Failing to elicit the necessary support, he gave $10,000 and accepted plans for the monument before his death in October, 1912. The monument stands on the south side of Capitol Square, midway between Fayetteville and Salisbury streets. On the Southern side, in bas relief, is a grandmother in a sitting position with a book in her lap. The woman is relating the story of the Civil War to her grandson, who grasps the hilt of his father's sword.

On the Eastern side is a bas relief representing a Confederate soldier going to war. His return in an emaciated condition and ragged, but welcomed by the Women of the Confederacy, is depicted on the Western side. The monument is inscribed "To the North Carolina Women of the Confederacy."

J. A. Long, chairman of the monument committee, presided over today's ceremonies, which began in the local auditorium and were concluded at the site of the monument. The principal address of the occasion was delivered by Dr. Daniel Harvey Hill, a son of Col. D. H. Hill, who commanded the first North Carolina regiment in the battle of Bethel, 52 years ago today.

The court square, where the unveiling took place, was crowded with members of the North Carolina division Confederate Veterans, commanded by General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., and other spectators. Ashley Horne, the young grandson of the donor of the monument, drew the veil from the statue after which an appropriate poem was read by Dr. Henry J. Stockard. Chairman Long formally presented the memorial to the state of North Carolina in a short address, which was responded to by Gov. Locke Craig in behalf of the state.

Final Vote in Senate Likely to Be Taken Before Adjournment Tonight

WILSON'S LEADERS SAY MEASURE WILL PASS

Say Administration Measure Will Have Safe Majority—Compromise Today

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—The long historic debate over the repeal of tolls exemptions was in its last stages today when the Senate resumed work with the prospect of the final voting before adjournment tonight. The Administration leaders claimed the repeal would pass with a safe majority. First in order for voting came the amendments to the bill as passed by the House. The principal ones, a compromise between Senate Democrats and Republicans, qualified the repeal with a reservation that it should not be construed as a waiver of the right of the United States to pass American coastwise ships through the canal free of tolls. It was generally conceded that this amendment would pass.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—Consideration of the tolls exemption repeal bill was continued by the Senate. Leaders declined to make any predictions, but with night sessions, from now on, they were hopeful of its early disposition.
