HENRY FORD SAYS PESSIMISTS ARE ONLY BUSINESS HARM

Detroit Auto Manufacturer Tells President Wilson Outlook is Good

CALAMITY TALK NOT WELL FOUNDED NOW

He Saw No Evidence of Any Sort of Depression Except Pessimism

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9.—Optimistic views of business conditions were presented to President Wilson by Henry Ford, the Detroit manufacturer, during their hour's conference at the White House. Ford told the President that he saw no evidence of any sort of a business depression, psychological or otherwise, and said that in his opinion business is getting better all the time. "There is absolutely nothing wrong with business," Ford told the President. "The only trouble is that some people are pessimistic. If everyone would only cheer up and attend to their business this calamity talk would stop immediately." The President and Mr. Ford discussed the trust bills in a general way as well as the business situation. Officials close to the President said he is greatly encouraged by his talk with Ford and he had been further strengthened in his determination to push his trust program during the next session of Congress. Ford used to discuss his call, saying that a business depression was unworthy of denial.

Two parties set out for Herald Island, but were unable to land. A description of their experience sent by Bartlett to Ottawa was taken to mean that they did not afterward join their comrades. This, however, Bartlett said yesterday, was an error. Bartlett later set out for North Cape, Siberia, with one Eskimo and finally crossed to Nome.
