Hundreds of Them Killed to Save Salmon—Exciting Battle on Beach

Marshall and Boye, who are engaged in the destruction of the seals which infest the Umpqua River, are meeting with good success. For the short time they have been at work they have succeeded in destroying over 200. They have sturgeon hooks fastened to all the snares and logs where the seals are accustomed to climb upon, which makes it almost impossible for the seal to get back into the water without being hooked, over a dozen a day being caught in this manner.

They had a very exciting experience one morning when they surprised a herd of seal, getting between them and the water on the sand spit where the seals had come out to rest. They estimated that there were over 500 in the herd. They used up all the ammunition they had and attacked them with their knives, also using their guns as clubs. The seals made desperate efforts to get back into the water, viciously attacking the men. One succeeded in biting Boye through the hand, he having to use his rifle to pry the mouth of the seal open so as to release his hand. Before they could get off of the sand spit the hunters succeeded in killing fifty, and probably as many more were so wounded that they will die. Had the ammunition held out the two men think they would have destroyed as many more. Since that time the seals have become scarcer, and it is thought they are leaving for other haunts. It is said that during the run of salmon that one seal will destroy five salmon each day, besides keeping the fish from entering the river. Already at this rate there will be a saving of 1000 salmon a day—Umpqua Courier.

They were actively engaged in combatting the flames. The fire was confined to a deep gulch where a lot of timber and sawdust had been dumped. A light wind was blowing, and it was feared that the fire would spread to one or more of the buildings in the vicinity. Owing to the depth of the gulch and the early start of the fire, the firemen had a difficult task in checking the flames.

Small Engine Used.

The little engine, four hose carts and 2000 feet of hose were used at Bunker Hill. While the timber is still smouldering, there is little danger of the fire spreading. The timber was thoroughly soaked as well as the shrubbery and fallen timber within a radius of 200 feet. No damage was done to any property in the neighborhood.

Not one of the firemen who went to fight the Bunker Hill fire had time to more than reach his home before the second alarm was sounded. Some came on a run to the Blanco fire and others came on motorcycles. Most of the firemen were tired out, but all declared that they were still in the ring and ready to respond to a third alarm if necessary.

That part of the Blanco which was damaged by fire and water is owned by J. W. Bennett. The Enterprise Market, which was damaged more by water than by fire, is owned by George King. Slight damage was done to the Blanco Cafe.

Firemen say that if the Blanco fire had started thirty minutes sooner than it did it would have gained considerable headway before the department could have been of any service.

Firemen Called.

Following is a list of the firemen who fought the Blanco fire: H. Carlyle, J. W. Davis, A. B. Campbell, D. Ferguson, H. Hillyer, D. B. Keating, M. Kruger, E. A. Lindberg, G. C. Lattin, J. W. Hunt, C. Longstaff, P. Flanagan, L. Rose, G. Selig, W. Sleep, N. Stambene, A. Tribbey, W. Trover and Gordon Smith.

All of the above named were at the Bunker Hill fire with the exception of L. Larson, M. J. Ostrow, G. Gulovson, R. Lang, O. Gulovson, Hal Stutsman, W. Longstaff, P. Flanagan and A. Tribbey. They were retained in case of an outbreak within the city limits.

succeeded in saving some of the furnishing in the two rear rooms, but lost most of his clothing, including a valuable overcoat.

The fire attracted a large crowd, many of whom were dressed in scant attire. People could be seen coming from every direction soon after the alarm was sounded. Several volunteered their services and assisted the firemen. Every man in the department was strenuously engaged in fighting the fire, but fortunately no one was hurt. All reported at the station when the fire was extinguished.

Bunker Hill Fire.
 The Bunker Hill fire, which is still smouldering, is immediately back of the Erikson Hotel and only a few yards from the railroad. It evidently caught from a spark from a locomotive. The fire started early yesterday evening, but the residents of Bunker Hill did not anticipate any danger until about 9 o'clock last night. W. F. Miller, superintendent of the Southern Pacific, sent in the call for the fire department.

Last night was the regular night for fire drill, and the boys were all gathered about the station for the meeting, when the alarm came in. The run to Bunker Hill was made in quick time. More than twenty firemen responded and there were several residents of Bunker Hill who
