Back To The Land

Most of us would like to live in the country, but we cannot arrange to do so. However, in selecting a site for a city home we can choose a place where some of the benefits of country life can be enjoyed; where the air is pure and healthful, free from smoke and dust, scented with the perfume of wild flowers and pine trees; where the soil is fertile and lots are large enough to accommodate a garden both for roses, sweet peas and other ornamental flowers and for garden peas, strawberries, potatoes and cabbages.

FIRST ADDITION TO MARSHFIELD offers these good things to you. In addition, it possesses certain advantages not obtainable in the country—graded streets, city water service, telephones, and a large community of progressive neighbors.
