NATIONAL EDUCATORS OPPOSE SEX HYGIENE

The strong protest against teaching sex hygiene in the public schools recently voiced by leading educators at the Annual Convention of the National Educational Association at St. Paul, will be heartily approved by the more thoughtful of our people. One of the most unfortunate tendencies in individual and civic life today is the disposition to shirk grave responsibilities in the home and in public affairs. Too many people seem anxious to shift to the school all considerations relating to one of the gravest and most intimately sacred responsibilities that rest with parents—that of imparting to the young the most delicate and important truths. This duty and the serious responsibility of developing a strong, clean, wholesome and moral character belong primarily to the parent, and their evasion cannot fail to work injury to the parents themselves, to civic life, and to the rising generation.

Dr. Charles H. Keene of Minneapolis was right when, in speaking before the assembled teachers, he strongly condemned the parents who thought they had no time to teach their children "the fundamental truths of life, and would throw the responsibility upon teacher or a football coach." Dr. Keene further stated that "sex instruction in schools will tend to lower the standard of morality. If we take up sex hygiene in our schools, the homes of America will continue to lose ground and will give up the few privileges they now have to train the children."

That these grave truths were heartily applauded by the members of the Association is an encouraging sign of the recession of the wave of hysteria that has affected many communities during the past few years, and it is a proper rebuke to the Federal Bureau of Education for permitting advocacy of sex hygiene to be made a part of the recently issued report of the Commissioner of Education.

PHONOGRAPH THE UNIVERSAL MUSICAL INSTRUMENT.

IN ORDER to make sure that the records when completed will produce music in exactly the proper tempo for the popular dances, one of the large phonograph companies engages professional dancers, who execute the steps while the band plays. The resulting dance records are shipped to every part of the world, for the phonograph has, in the space of a few years, become the one absolutely universal musical instrument. Its popularity among the savage Filipinos is no less than with the natives of Africa, India, China and South America, as indicated by an illustration in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine. Several large manufacturing plants devote their energies exclusively to the production of phonographs and phonograph records for the export trade.
