PERSONAL MENTION

THAYER GRIMES says that artists are all right when they can draw a salary.
GUY CHAMBERS says if Oregon goes dry whiskey will become a drug on the market.
MEL DUNCAN, our well known actor, will shortly return to the stage after a time devoted to legitimate business.
CLAUDE HURT got hurt at the Chandler the other day. Claude ought to be more careful with that name.
FRANK COHAN, our managing editor promised a few Squibbs for this issue but says he found the demand so great he could not spare us any—that's why we are short of Squibbs this week.
AUGUST FRIZEEN made a trip to Lakeside this week. He says the Germans sympathize with the Germans and the Irish with the Irish in that section during the war troubles.
HARRY M'KEOWN of the Chandler says he thinks the dispatches that come from Berlin are slightly colored in favor of the Germans. Harry has now cut sauer kraut off the bill of fare as well as German fried potatoes.

The melancholy days have come. Oh, brother can you grin. For while the rain is coming down The bills are coming in.

New Hardware Catalogue.—You have seen those large volumes carried by the hardware hustlers. These books are just about the size appearance and weight of the Portland city directory. The other day one of our popular traveling salesmen, Archie Johnston of Willie Relchers or maybe it was Harry Bultman, each of them deny the story and to avoid a libel suit the Booster names all three, stopped in the Chandler lobby on their way to visit a customer. Jim Forsythe caught sight of the hardware catalogue and the Portland directory about the same time. This gave Jim an idea and Jim was so astonished that he promptly executed it. That's why Jim has so few ideas—whenever he gets one he executes it. Jim promptly exchanged the hardware catalogue for the directory. When Bultman got ready to go he picked up the hardware man's burden and sailed forth in search of victims and orders. Calling on his first customer he began telling how the European war had raised the price of carpet tacks because of the immense demand caused by the many at-tacks over there. To prove it he proceeded to open his catalogue. Imagine his horror and surprise when he found only a choice collection of names—they probably all had their price but the prices were not attached. Even with that big book full of names it did not contain some of the names that Harry—or Archie—or Willie called the man who switched the catalogue and the directory. Harry hurried back to the Chandler and got his catalogue but the trouble had not been adjusted up to the hour of going to press and The Booster regrets that in its next issue it may have to chronicle another war.

Pugsley Saw It—We knew it was coming. Frank Pugsley suggests that this war is the worst war Warsaw ever saw. See?

New Barber Rules.—J. I. Terrell announces that the Marshfield barbers are considering the adoption of a rule by which men with "concrete faces" will have to pay double price for a shave. A concrete face is caused by a mixture of cement dust and perspiration and is caused by working with cement and is said to turn the edge of the best razor. There are other men with "stony" faces that will continue to get "scrapes" at the old price.

Central Avenue to the Front.—You can't keep Central Avenue out of the spotlight. L. F. Wilson, special representative of H. J. Heinz Co., found on Central Avenue a grocery store, Ollivant & Weaver, carrying 51 of the famous "Heinz 57 Varieties." They promptly ordered the others and now Ollivant & Weaver is the only store in Oregon that carries the complete line, being ahead of Portland. Quite an honor for Central Avenue and Coos Bay as well as Ollivant & Weaver.
