"GOODNIGHT."

I say "Goodnight," an old and simple phrase
And spoken by mankind in countless ways,
Some with a careless, cold formality,
Some with a false cheerfulness,
Some tenderly, with meanings deep and true;
What think you that my "Goodnight" has for you?
"Goodnight"—that means I wish you sweetest dreams,
Such as the roses have by lulling streams,
"Goodnight"—that is my prayer that all the night
Beside your sleep shall watch an angel while.
"Goodnight"—that means you can not guess how dear
This day has been because I had you near,
"Goodnight"—that means just as I close the door
That I shall love you more—and more—and more—Selected.

ATTENDED a luncheon a year or so ago at which Annette Kellerman, the wonderful swimmer, was the honor guest, says Sallie Sloane. The centerpiece at this function was a large bowl of gold fish and at each cover was an individual bowl with one solitary gold fish which each guest was permitted to take home as a souvenir; but these things are non-essentials, mere incidents of an enjoyable occasion.

The chief interest of the event centered in the young woman whom the newspaper women of Denver delighted to honor. She talked of herself, ordinarily, that is a most tedious performance when one occupies the position of listener, but here was a young woman with a story to tell.

She told first of all that she was a very homely little girl, undeveloped and unattractive. Her appearance was a great cross to her until suddenly she decided that she would look like other girls. She set herself a difficult task, but she had stick-to-itiveness and today she earns a large salary as a spectacular swimmer on the Orpheum circuit and adds to her income by writing high-priced physical culture articles for the leading magazines.

Miss Kellerman declared that the reason that the American woman is not the finest woman physically in the world is because she has not perseverance.

"She tries an exercise for one night and when she feels stiff and sore the next morning from the effects of her unusual exertion she at once concludes that it is too strenuous and discontinues it. This very soreness proves that her muscles are not properly exercised and that they need daily stimulus," said Miss Kellerman.

Swimming is naturally the favorite diversion of this famous athletic girl, but she places walking next in the catalogue of beneficial exercise.

Mrs. Entertainer:-

Life isn't worth living if you live it all by yourself. Why not GIVE A PARTY now and then and enjoy all your friends together. Of course you will want to open your whole house and have every room appear well. We can sell you furniture that will make you proud of your home. If some of yours is old-style or worn, replace it from our new, up-to-date stock. We will save you money with our moderate PRICES.

PLAIN TALK FOR PLAIN PEOPLE--TOLD IN A PLAIN WAY

When you think of buying furniture or articles for your home, do you look upon money spent in this manner as gone for good?

Or are you among the ever-greater number of people who are finding out that money spent for this class of goods at our store always has either a CASH VALUE or an EXCHANGE VALUE?

Yes, and either one of these values can be realized on at any time you see fit.

We will make a cash offer for any goods that we sell at any time the goods are offered to us.

The Exchange Value of Your Goods

A great deal may be said in regard to this, as its importance is not generally appreciated when purchasing.

In the first place, suppose you wished to make a change in any of your rooms. Would you throw these articles away or practically give them away? Why not take advantage of our exchange department and make these goods go towards paying for the new goods needed?

There are thousands of reasons why it may become necessary to make a change.

Then take advantage of our exchange department.
