THE CLOAK OF DREAMS

They bade me follow fleet
Where my brothers work and play,
But the Cloak of Dreams blew over
my feet,
Tangling them from the way.

They bade me watch the skies
For a signal dark or light,
But the Cloak of Dreams blew over
my eyes,
Shutting them fast from sight.

I have no pain nor mirth,
Wonderment nor desire,
The Cloak of Dreams 'twixt me and
earth,
Wavers it drowsy fire.

I dream in dusk apart,
Hearing a strange bird sing,
And the Cloak of Dreams blows
over my heart,
Binding and sheltering.

IT WILL be a dancing winter. Although there seems to be no definite reason for believing this pronouncement to be a true prophecy yet from New York to San Francisco the verdict has been accepted, and the character of the amusement having been decided upon attention focused upon the dances that will capture popular favor.

The Harvest Hall given last evening may be considered the opening function of the autumn season. The success of this initial affair may be taken as indicating the popularity of dancing as the principal social diversion for the coming season.

CLUB MEETING.

The Mothers and Teachers' Club of North Bend held a very pleasant meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Central School building, with a goodly number of parents and teachers present. The program was exceptionally good, beginning with a song by the pupils from Miss Heath's room, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Gardner. The little folks were once again responded with another song. A paper was then read by Mrs. A. S. Hisey on "Bacteria, Our Friends and Foes," which was instructive as well as interesting. Mr. Earl Brown, with Miss Raab as accompanist, gave one of his pleasing violin solos. Miss Raab and Miss Mende then rendered two lively piano duets which were much enjoyed.
