

THE PRIMARY ELECTION VOTE IS LIGHT IN ALL PARTS OF MARSHFIELD

Harry Kimball, J. F. Telander, Carl Evertsen and John Butler Head Three Parties.

VOTE FOR JUDGE.

District Attorney Elliott says that it is not certain yet that Judge Hall will hold over for two years. In consequence, election officials are instructed to tell voters to vote for their preference for county judge, as this election may prove valid and the vote will determine whether James Watson, a Republican, or J. J. Stanley, will occupy the office.

J. F. Telander and Harry Kimball, by large majorities received enough votes in the city primary election of Saturday to secure the nomination on the three party tickets for three year council candidates at the city election to be held December 7. Carl Evertsen had practically no opposition in getting the three party nominations for the one year of council service and John Butler, for city recorder, won out more than "16 to 1."

In all there were 389 votes cast. Out of this number 248 were Republican, 110 Democratic and 21 Progressive. Kimball received 128 Republican votes, 43 Democratic and 15 Progressive. Telander secured 129 Republican votes, 52 from the Democrats and the Progressives netted him 17. Carl Evertsen came out with 118 Republican votes, 55 from the Democrats and Teddy's party gave him fifteen calls. That these three men will become the candidates of all three parties on the December ticket, is the belief of City Attorney Goss. However, the field is not limited to these candidates alone. Within 25 days previous to the City election petitions may be circulated for independent candidates.

The following table is of votes cast according to precinct, party and term of office:

REV KNOTTS PREACHES A GREAT SERMON SUNDAY

WAXES ELOQUENT AGAINST THE SALOON IN A STRONG DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH YESTERDAY.

The congregation at the Methodist Church were roused by the sermon preached by the pastor yesterday morning. It was a strong appeal to vote 332 X Yes. The sermon was as follows:

'PRAYER OF DEFENSE'

Psalm 70:2 Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul; let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

A nation's wealth consists of its possessions. Not particularly its dependent territories, though these often add greatly to the wealth of a nation, but rather its immediate riches or that which produces riches, such as a lively commerce, trade, and business of various kinds which produce prosperous communities. For a nation to be truly wealthy there must be back of the more immediate visible riches the resource which may produce and maintain wealth. Some great nations which appear to be wealthy, if left to depend upon resources of their native land would be in a straightened circumstances in a very short time. Thus England with her great navy and greater merchant marine, if left to live by itself would soon be distressed with millions of starving people, for England does not grow the common foodstuffs in sufficient quantities to feed her own people, but depends upon other lands for her food.

On the other hand resources alone do not make up the true wealth of a nation. Some of the richest nations on the earth so far as what is possible of being produced within their boundaries are classed among the poorer nations. Thus we find a number of the South American Republics.

Immediate possessions and resources combined do not make a nation truly wealthy and great. Russia, perhaps no other nation, has immense territory and with it almost boundless resources, and yet within her borders she has thousands upon thousands, yes millions of people who live in comparative ignorance, poverty and squalor.

A nation to be truly rich and truly great, must not only have immediate possessions and great resources upon which it may draw, but it must also have that greatest of assets, a manhood that has character. Russia with all her possessions, resources, and population, was compelled to bow before little Japan because her drunken vodka soldiery were no match for the temperate manhood of the island Empire. But today, when the liquors are being denied the soldiers, the armies of Russia, in the Titanic struggle of the ages, seem to be holding their own fairly well against the most trained armies of the world.

Now comes the remarkable dispatch by the Associated Press from Petrograd (St. Petersburg) stating that the Czar had prohibited the sale of vodka indefinitely. The original edict prohibited it during the war but in two months the edict transferred the peasantry from "hopeless indolence and depravity into self-respecting citizens. The resultant prosperity, orderliness and general regeneration has been startling" said the dispatch. So Russia leads the world in National prohibition.

FUNDS FOR GIRLS HOME

Maude Booth Home for Portland Girls Asks Financial Aid From Coos Bay. Mrs. L. B. Jones, representative of the Maude Booth Home, the private institution for Portland Working Girls left this morning for Bandon where she goes to seek financial aid for the home following a weeks campaign on the Bay. To furnish a clean and comfortable home for girls, where they will be well cared for and at a low cost, is the primary object of the Maude Booth Home. With hundreds of girls flocking to the city, many of them working for small wages, a home of this type, declared Mrs. Jones, welcomes them and a personal interest is taken in their welfare.

Girls there pay the running expenses of the home, but at present funds are being solicited for the erection of a new and more adequate building on valuable lots, years ago donated to the home, in the very heart of the city. To make a trip over the entire state in search for funds is the aim of Mrs. Jones.

ter, and soul, are indivisible, inseparable in the makeup of a true man. As we realize that a nation's manhood is its greatest asset, and that man's greatest value lies within his life, character and soul, so must a community, like Marshfield find its true wealth to lie within the life, character, and soul of its inhabitants as individuals. Whatever might be fatal to life, character and soul of the individuals of a community would be fatal to the community itself. Whatever would be beneficial would on the other hand establish its true wealth. But we have an institution within our borders that seeks the life debases the character, and dams the soul.

In our text the Psalmist implores protection for his soul and body against the wicked. The soul and bodies of our manhood and womanhood, yea of our boys and girls are threatened more and more as the days go by with an evil, which, if not conquered, will be our ruin, but if overcome, streams of golden wealth and happiness will be showered upon us. This evil which takes the life debases the character, and damns the soul through all eternity is none other than the liquor traffic. As long as it exists it stands as a menace. Were any foreign power to destroy the life and wreck and ruin and isaster upon our citizens as does this evil in Marshfield alone, long ago we would have appealed to the Governor and Governor to the President and if the foreign power should act as arrogantly and insolently as does the liquor traffic we would have had war forthwith. Yet we allow this evil to exist and to pursue its course of desolation and destruction.

Why should not David's prayer be Marshfield's prayer? Who are the patrons of the saloons? Perhaps we are not much concerned as to who are now the patrons as to who are going to be the patrons. If the saloons exist they must have customers. Give them a chance and they will look after that part of their traffic. Let them continue to exist and they will by and by have our boys and girls. Without our boys and girls the time would come when they would go out of business. If we continue to let them exist we must turn the children of our homes over to them, something we are already doing altogether too fast. The saloons are seeking our souls and our hurt, they are seeking every man, woman, and child they can get. Why will we not pray with David as of old, "Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul; let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt?"

No monopoly, no trust, no more greedy or selfish, none more careless of results to mankind, none more pitiless, none more hateful, none more tyrannical, none more unprincipled, none more unpatric than the liquor interests. Their profits are enormous. It is money they want and money they will get. Law and order will be defied. When the liquor interests say that prohibition will not prohibit, it is the same thing as saying they intend to violate the new law if passed. In other words, they intend to be anarchists. That is not strange. History all over the country shows that saloons are constantly violating the laws and are the breeding places of crime. Through the cravings of man's appetite will they enslave him and make him pay heavy tribute as such by securing his earnings in payment for that which but makes him all the more their slave, which ruins his intellect, degrades his character, and makes him lower than a brute. No shame in his downfall, no shame in the sorrow and woe of the wife and children, no pity, no love, and when crime, the fruit of this evil, has resulted from the maddened brain, then it is the liquor interests reach out no hand of charity, but give the laugh of scorn. No wonder the criminals in our penitentiaries both East and West are appealing to the better class of citizens to rid the land of this monster!

Where is the love and charity of the saloon? When I buried poor

Clara Jack, victim of that awful and tragedy on Pony Slough, which so startled us all a few short months ago, what were the circumstances of his burial? Without relatives in this part of the country, were his friends and boon companions present? No sermon was preached. If there had been there was none to listen but the undertaker. Who were the pall bearers at the grave? The undertaker, the hearse driver, the sexton, the preacher and two passers-by. How many men, every year, victims of the saloons, are buried without any burial service by the undertaker and sexton? Yet these men who have died from alcoholism, or committed suicide after drinking were once just as fair and just as sweet and just as innocent as the most darling baby boy in any home in Marshfield.

I tell you the saloons are after our boys and girls and they are determined to get them. Shall we be rid of this monster evil or shall we give them our very fairest and our very best? Shall we implore God and nothing do? "God helps those who help themselves." Let us not only pray but let us do what we can to make them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul; let them be turned backward and put to confusion, that desire my hurt. Mothers, Fathers, Brothers, Sisters, Neighbors, now is the time for action. We have it within our power with one cross of the pencil to drive the demon forever from our midst and

MERCHANTS GIVE PROOF THAT DRY TOWNS ARE BEST

Business Men Give Plain Statements of Fact

LIQUOR LIES REFUTED

BY ORTON E. GOODWIN
Publicity Department, Committee of One Hundred

All over Oregon advertisements paid for by the brewers and distillers (under various aliases), tell how fearfully awful business is in dry towns. The suggestion is that unless we spend all our spare coin in the saloon, everything will go to rack and ruin. Is that common sense?

Now, the facts are, that every dry town in Oregon is prosperous—very prosperous. Right here is proof in the form of brief interviews with the leading merchants in Oregon dry towns:

Salem Business Better. Joseph Albert, cashier Capital National Bank—"Contrary to the predictions of many business men, Salem has not suffered commercially on account of the closing of the saloons. Business has been fully as good as it would have been if the town had remained wet. I do not know of a city anywhere where business is as good as it is in Salem today. As a banker I am in a position to know."

Councilman W. L. Cummins, Squam Deal Realty Company—"Buildings formerly occupied by saloons are now being used for legitimate businesses. The 15 saloons are nearly all occupied. Vacant houses are few. Generally, business has been better."

Myers Department Store—"Business 10 per cent ahead of last year."

U. G. Holt, manager logging department, Spaulding Logging Company—"Plant will run full force all winter. More men taken on during year. Ten per cent heavier local demand for material, showing Salem dry has meant more building."

Officers of both the Capital National Bank and Salem Bank of Commerce—"Bank deposits have increased since Salem went dry."

Roseburg Business Increases. L. Masters, cashier Roseburg National Bank—"Deposits have increased, collections are better, credits less since Roseburg dry. All city improvements, paving, light, etc., since town dry."

B. W. Strong, furniture dealer—"No argument against Oregon dry. Means better business whole state. Roseburg dry has benefited my business a world. Men pay their bills now, instead of the saloon getting the money. They buy more, too."

Frank Churchill, Churchill Hardware Company—"Roseburg dry has meant money in pockets of everyone but the saloon. Checks are now cashed in stores, not in saloons. That means all city business is better and people are more prosperous."

Oregon City Prosperous. L. Adams, leading department store—"Oregon City dry has meant prosperity for Oregon City. Business is far better. Checks that used to be cashed in saloons are now cashed in stores. Where I used to cash 15 checks on mill pay nights, I now cash 50. Any story of hard times in Oregon City is a silly tale concocted by the saloon people."

E. E. Brodie, editor Oregon City Enterprise—"Both Oregon City newspapers are in favor of a dry state and a dry city. They know business has been far better since the town went dry."
