HUSBAND WRITES WIFE IN BATTLE

Marshfield Girl Married to French Soldier Receives First Word From Front

Three weeks of constant fighting with the French army in the trenches within fifty miles of Ostend and close to the North Sea repelling repeated attacks of the German right wing and with often the ground so strewn with dead men that the earth was barely visible in the vicinity of the trenches, has been the experience of Joseph Pompault, a Frenchman, who two months ago courted and later married Miss Henrietta Lecocq, daughter of Henry Lecocq, at 1074 Fourth street South. It was while the couple were on their honeymoon to San Francisco that Mr. Pompault received the summons to rejoin the regiment of infantry to which he had belonged three years before. He left New York for France on September 28 and the first letter received from him was written from the trenches during a lull in the almost incessant firing.

Joseph Pompault, on a sight-seeing trip through America, came to Coos Bay where he remained for many weeks and it was here that he met his wife. In the suburbs of Paris, with two brothers who are now with him on the firing line, Pompault owned a jewelry store. On his return a few weeks ago he found the building demolished; it had been in the range of big guns from the Paris forts and when the Germans threatened at the very heart of the French nation, hundreds of buildings along the Seine were razed to give the enormous cannon an open chance at the invaders.

Landing in France, Pompault went direct to the village of Chateaufort Vienne and there on October 10 rejoined his old comrades in the 232nd regiment of infantry and immediately marched away to the Belgium border.

On the extreme north wing of the great French and English battle line his regiment became entrenched and there they withstood daily for three weeks the desperate attempts of the Germans to break through their line to the North Sea. "For every German killed there were ten more to take their places," is the way Pompault describes the mighty hordes of Teutons who sought by weight of numbers to thrust their legions through the long French line.

In the main trench, which is about six feet deep, the soldiers have lived. Not only has their fighting been with rifles, but the rapid fire guns have played a mighty part in mowing down the invaders. Fighting alongside of Pompault are his two brothers. One of them, the latter states, has received eleven bullet holes through his coat and seven made their paths of daylight through his cap, but he has escaped unharmed.

Already the weather is getting cold and the men are expecting snow to fall this month, a fact which will add another horror to the bloody chapter of the war. And the fact that his company is soon to be sent to the rear, replaced by a fresh company, that they may rest, appeals not a little to Pompault and his comrades, for they are enthusiastic in their belief that the war at the most can last but two months longer.

The Belgian village of Dixmude, where the men are fighting in the deep main trench, is but a few miles from the old home of Henry Lecocq, father-in-law of Pompault, who has four nephews also on the firing line. Of two sisters, one of them has sent no word since the opening of the war and it is believed she has been killed or has fled with the refugees to the interior.

WOMAN IS MISSING MAY BE FOUL PLAY

Came to Dotson Hotel on Wednesday, Left Baggage, and Then Disappeared

A young woman of about 23 years of age, slender, dark and good looking, stepped into a taxicab at the depot last Wednesday and was driven to the Hotel Dotson where she deposited her baggage and took off her hat in the hotel parlor, used the long distance telephone and left the hotel. A few minutes later she is known to have inquired after the auto stage to North Bend and then disappeared completely, and for five days the police have been searching high and low for the missing woman. Not a trace has been found and whether she is dead or not is a question helping only to deepen the mystery that has surrounded her movements.

That the name of the young woman is Mrs. Robert Miller is the belief of the police who declare that at one time she worked in a North Bend laundry. Also she is said to sometimes sign her name Miss Bailey.

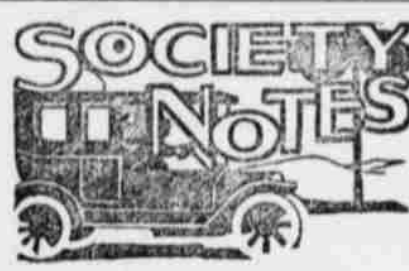

on Wednesday the woman called up a Mr. Hughes at the Baxter Hotel and to him was heard to say, "Miss Bailey had just dropped dead at Mrs. Bailey's home."

Investigation of this clue by the police discovered nothing and they believe the "Mrs. and Miss Bailey" to be fictitious names and that the message was for the purpose of getting the likewise mysterious Mr. Hughes to come to Coquille. The proprietor of the Baxter Hotel knows nothing of Mr. Hughes but declared that Mrs. Miller's husband was a railroad man killed about six months ago and that they had four children at the time. Mrs. Roberts is known to have had two children with her when she worked in North Bend.

The police at North Bend are equally at a loss to know what has become of the woman if there has been foul play in the affair and meanwhile the investigation is being continued.

AT THE HOTELS DEDICATE CHURCH OF HOLY REDEEMER Beautiful Services for Opening of New Catholic Church in North Bend The dedication of the Church of the Holy Redeemer, the beautiful Catholic edifice in North Bend, was held yesterday morning. More than 250 persons gathered for the service and the sermon by Father McDevitt. With a choir of thirteen voices music and singing was exceptionally good. The church, just completed by architect Ostlund, is about 14x24 in dimensions and was built at a cost of $3,800. It is connected with the Mercy Hospital on Sherman street. The windows are of extremely beautiful art glass and especially noticeable is the rose window over the sanctuary. There is a sacristy on the side of the church with separate screened off for the Sisters. Over the balcony is the choir loft and the organ. Mrs. Robert Gohardt was the organist yesterday; the members of the soprano soloists were Miss Annie Truman, Mrs. Ed Banks, Mrs. Robert Banks, Mrs. Ed Daigle, Miss Hoelling and Mrs. E. Ostlund and Miss Esther Johnson; the tenors B. H. Ostlund and Ed Hoether and of the bass section Tom Eberhart and Mr. Burrows. The special music was the recitation of the rosary mass in E flat. The former Catholic church at North Bend was situated in the section of the Mercy Hospital. The space is now to be utilized as a shop and the sun parlor is also extended to more than twice its former size and will border the passageway from the church to the main part of the hospital. Especially beautiful were the decorations yesterday, which were carefully and artistically done by the Sisters and the members of the congregation.
