PUBLIC LIBRARY NOW COMPLETE

With Arrival of Inside Furnishings, $12,500 Edifice to be Thrown Open

With the completion of Marsh-field's new public library there has been added to Coos Bay the most complete and modern building of its type in southwestern Oregon. The workmen have completed their efforts and all ready for occupancy when the furnishings arrive, and these are expected within a short time. Of special interest to the public is the large auditorium on the lower floor of the two story building, which has a seating capacity of more than 150 people and which will be available for club rooms and small public gatherings.
The outside structure of the building is reinforced concrete and as it stands on high ground at the intersection of Fifth and Market streets there is plenty of light coming from every direction and added to this is the fact that Architect W. S. Turpin has not been a bit sparing of his windows, leaving the building very well lighted throughout all its interior.
The dimensions of the building are 50x44 feet. Entering the building on Market avenue and passing through the high archway portals of the entrance one enters the main library room. Directly in from the door is the massive charging desk of the librarian, done in Oregon fir. On either side are the reading rooms, one of which will be given over to the use of the children. In these they will have a cherry fireplace and shelves for their books. The other reading room contains stacks for books, shelves in all for the keeping of more than 7000 volumes.
With a tinting of light brown on the walls and the ceiling in cream, the light is reflected to the reading desks in all parts of the reading rooms. The electric lighting will be by means of the semi-direct system, which makes no glaring light to weary the eyes of the readers. In the rear of the charging desk is the librarian's room, done off on all sides in heavy plate glass. A sanitary drinking fountain has been placed in the main room.
Down the stairs from the main floor, one goes direct to the auditorium which, like the remainder of the building, is finished entirely in the Oregon fir. And on this floor there is a women's rest room, the librarian's work room and the boiler room. The work room of the librarian has a hand elevator going direct to the plate glass room above.
Throughout the entire building the one scheme of using the Oregon fir has been the method used. Even the heavy reading tables that must be of oak will be so finished off as to match the woodwork around the building, and the same will be true of the chairs. On the floor it is expected that heavy battleship linoleum will be laid.
For more than a year and a half the library committee did faithful work toward securing the new public library. Their efforts were rewarded with a donation of $12,500 from Andrew Carnegie, this sum to cover not only the cost of the building but the furnishings as well. Actual construction was started in April and since that time Architect Turpin has been busy putting on the finishing touches to the end that next month the public of Marshfield may have a pleasant place to spend their reading hours.
Those who were on the committee which worked so earnestly for this building are as follows: Mrs. Henry Sengstacken, chairman; Mrs. J. W.
Bennett, vice-president; Mrs. W. S.
Chandler, treasurer; Mrs. M. C. Mc-Inney, secretary; and Mrs. H. S. Tower. The librarian, Miss Elizabeth Topping, has enthusiastically co-operated with the committee in helping with the adjustment of many difficult problems that have presented themselves.
In the present library there are about 3000 volumes. It is hoped to increase this amount through public donations, some of which have already been received.

Editor Times:
WITH HERE and there an exception, the day when teachers thought they owned, and practically did own their schools, has passed into history. Educators worthy the name, everywhere, are inviting and urging parents, and men and women of affairs to criticize, to suggest, to co-operate with superintendents and teachers in making the school exist for the child's good. In progressive communities the teacher reciprocates by taking a hand in the home training of the child and the child who comes to school showing the effect of a careless home by poor nourishment, inadequate clothing, or an ill-smelling body, at once becomes the protégé, so to speak, of his teacher and his school, in things personal as well as in things educational. Parent-duty in the school-life of the child; teacher-duty in the home-life of the child—these two things herald the new era of educational history. And the teacher who cannot adjust himself or herself to these two modern changes in education should leave the profession at once, as the march of educational progress will surely put him or her out of the profession anyway.
The person in charge of help who cannot inspire in that help a wholesome regard for criticism and suggestion, is a failure as an overseer, as an employer, as a leader of any kind, but most of all as a school superintendent upon whom devolves the duty of a three-fold inspiration, an inspiration that will reach teacher, pupil and parent, and brings about a mutual working together of teacher and parent for the good of the child that can be attained in no other way.
The man or woman of real worth is the person alive to his own faults and his own weaknesses, and who is ever on the alert for criticism, and suggestions that may help him to render better service, not so much for the better pay, but because of the greater self-esteem and sense of self-power which come from the knowledge of keeping abreast of one's work.
The weak and inefficient teacher, like the weak and inefficient worker in any line, resents not only all criticism but he even resents helpful suggestion which may hint that his weaknesses are observed and understood. The really efficient worker in the schoolroom as elsewhere, can well afford to smile at incompetent or even unjust criticism and go on his way rejoicing in a sense of his own superior worth, and when something really useful and usable in the way of criticism or suggestion comes to such a person, he speedily makes of it working material and forgets that the new knowledge was not always his own; which indeed it really was, for the wise learner is the legiti-mate inheritor of the knowledge of all ages.
To summarize: The person who resents criticism and suggestion has ceased to grow and is a menace to progress, while the person who has in charge affair that affect the lives of others, and who cannot inspire in his co-workers a right attitude toward criticism and suggestion, is a failure. He should earn his living with pick and shovel and not by tampering with the minds of children, dwarfing the souls of his fellowmen and endangering the future of his country by hypocritical leadership.
The worm squirms when disturbed, the grasshopper hops, the reptile hisses away, but the ant and the bee, wise to their own ability and worth, go steadily and silently on with their work. —VERITAS.

MACK'S NEW MODEL

World Dispose of Three Star Pitchers of Philadelphia Team Now:

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The starting announcement that Connie Mack had asked waivers on the Philadelphia Athletics' trio of pitchers, Bender, Plank and Coombs, furnished a sensational climax to a season-at baseball season. Many explanations, aside from the rather vague one put forward by Mack, have been offered, but the only reasonable certainty is that Mack as well as the magnates of the American League knew full well that Bender and Plank at least, would never leave the Junior major league. Coombs, because of his long illness, is considered a negligible quantity. Plank has a grand pitching average of .646 and a world's series average of .290 since joining the Athletics. Bender has a better record, his league pitching average for twelve years being .650 and his world's series average .524. Notwithstanding their age, from a baseball standpoint, it is likely that both will be placed with other American League clubs during the shifts and readjustments sure to take place this winter.

On account of the serious illness of her father, Lillian Senman has been absent the later part of the week.
Eveline Malbany left school on Thursday. Her parents have moved to San Francisco.
Due to illness, the following pupils have been absent during the week: Dudley Hill, Norman Wilson and Viola Micklen.
Eighth Grade
The Friday morning art lesson was on designing a motto. Some good designs were made by Wilma Hoagland, Ruth Anderson, George Deubner, Virginia Clarke, Russell Quaternass, Glenda Farrell, Edward Johnson, Mabel Lingo, George Schroeder and Mary McArthur.
In the weekly spelling test, the best grades were made by Anna
