them. No gift should be able to express the whole heart; if it does, the heart must be small. At the moment when you have given your best, your love cries: "It is nothing to what I would LIKE to do." And the Father says: "This UNUTTERED coin is the measure of you; to this unspoken sympathy I will raise a monument." And there it stands: "Thy prayers have come up as a memorial before God." Every truly great man is greater by far than either his words or his deeds. There is an expressible, an "undoable" something in him that measures his greatness. The Apostle says again: "Owe no man anything but to love one another." Every debt in life can be paid except that of love. This is too great to be paid. If you don't believe it, ask the mother. See her bend over her sick child, and as she watches night and day, doing all that any mortal could possibly do, hear the unuttered prayer from her heart to God that she might do a thousand times more. You can never do all or speak all that love bids, and this is your worth in God's sight.

And so, my Father, build to my love. Not by what I can DO to my brother judge me. My deeds are paltry and poor. It is but a pebble that I cast into the sea of human misery. It cannot lessen much the depth of that sea. But my heart is bigger than my hand. This UNUTTERED coin, the sympathy that cannot speak, is more precious in Thy sight, than my feeble words or deeds and to this erect Thou a monument. To the beggar who lives in a garret and upon the munificence of others, Thou canst erect such a monument, for in that pauper's heart might be treasured golden wishes for humanity. A clergyman was called once to a home from which the husband and father had been taken away by a most distressing death. On his return, being asked what he said to them, he replied: "I could say nothing, I simply sat down and wept with them." Oh, what a sympathy that was. To such UNUTTERED coin of love God erects his monument in Heaven, and let us thank Him that Heaven is full of such monuments. Let me learn that the highest subscriber is the donor of LOVE.

SAYS BUNCH IS OF WORST TYPE

Judge Hamilton Scores Loon Man Accused by Him Lake Bandit — Gardiner

A Roseburg paper gives the following additional details in the Bunch case:

"This is without doubt the most cold-blooded case that has ever come to my attention," was the statement of Judge J. W. Hamilton, when he sentenced Ray Bunch, the youthful assailant of Frank Kuhn, the Loom Lake rancher, to an indeterminate term of from ten years to life in the state penitentiary.

"You deserve no leniency," said Judge Hamilton, "and I hope that the severest penalty will be enforced in this case. You tortured this poor old man and left him helpless, to die. I cannot conceive that you can be so depraved. You are surely deserving the extreme penalty provided by the law."

Bunch attributes his trouble to evil associates. "I have been a wanderer for years," said Bunch, "and my associations have been evil. I have come in contact with criminals of every type and have heard much about 'easy money.' As I look back I can now see where I made the one fatal error of my life-time. I have nothing to lose, however, and I only hope that James Ferguson, the guard who was placed over me at Gardiner, will be compelled to return every dollar he received from me to the poor old man."

"Ferguson has the money," said Bunch, "and he lies when he says I did not give it to him. I consider Ferguson a worse criminal than myself. He was acting in the capacity of an officer, yet he took this old man's money from me and refuses to give it back. He should receive a severe penalty."

Ferguson Maintains Innocence.

James Ferguson denies emphatically that he received $470 from Ray Bunch, as alleged by the prisoner. This denial he made in the presence of Sheriff Quine, Frank Kuhn, Deputy Sheriff Hopkin, District Attorney Brown and other court officers this afternoon. While in jail Bunch and Ferguson had bitter words, and it was only through the interference of a third party that a fistie encounter was avoided.

Sheriff Quine is satisfied that Ferguson has the money, as alleged by Bunch, but anticipates difficulty in substantiating his suspicions. In the language of the sheriff, Ferguson is one of the shrewdest men he has had in custody for a long time. He will be held in the county jail here pending further developments.

Kuhn Old Friend.

In a statement, Mr. Kuhn, Bunch's victim, said he was the oldest living settler in the Loom Lake country, and was well acquainted with Ray Bunch prior to the time the latter left there four years ago. Often, Mr. Kuhn said, he purchased gifts for Bunch when the latter was a mere child. Bunch spent much of his time at the home of Mr. Kuhn and was conversant with the aged man's habits.
