Association.

I ain't for mortal man to know

It wa'n't exac'ly fair

Has lighted up two lovin' hearts

The ways of Providence, an' so

When Cupid, with his burnin' darts,

For Fate, with her bambooslin' arts,

To amparate the pair.

Now, there was Cyrus Allen's case.

When he had come within an ace

For Kitty Warren's hand

He stubbed his mind, as you might say,

Deceivin' Fate had planned.

Of bein' winner in the race

Upon a shadow, so that they

Were parted in the very way

It all begun when Kitty said

She wished she had a plaster head

Of Byron, for she'd read an' read

For Cyrus, with his heart aflame,

Anonymous to Kit.

The pieces that he writ.

Had bought the bust an' nent the same

That night he moant to tell his mind,

That he misunderstood.

"That's her an' Nathan Black," he said,

An' quit the town for good.

But Fate had fixed it so's he'd find

Two shadows on her window blind

"An' she's a strokin' of his head."

So, broken hearted, Cyrus fled

If he'd, 'a' had the sense to wait

But only Byron's plaster pate

He'd soon 'a' knowed it wasn't Nate,

That Kitty was caressin,

For she was sure it came from Cy.

So, Chris'mus mornin', here it came,

I merely say it seems as though
