Inspectors Edwards and Fuller to Arrive Here Aboard Geo. W. Elder on Monday To investigate difficulties arising out of two rival steamboat lines on the Coquille, Inspectors C. S. Edwards and George F. Fuller are expected to arrive aboard the George W. Elder from Portland on Monday morning. They will take the afternoon train for the county seat, where depositions will be taken on Tuesday in the trouble between O. R. Willard and the Panters. According to a letter just received by Sheriff Johnson from the inspectors, they will be in the Coquille Valley and at Bandon for several days. What else the inspectors may have on hand is not now known. Several weeks ago they were coming south, and, in fact, had already started, when Mr. Edwards took suddenly sick and was removed from the Elder at Astoria, thus postponing their trip indefinitely. At that time the A. M. Simpson was in the harbor and an investigation was to have been made regarding the collision last spring with the government dredge Michie. The testimony of the Michie's crew has already been taken.

AMPHIBIOUS AUTO MAKES BEACH TRIP Carries Baggage and Passengers When Baggage Stage Breaks Down. Like a bird of the sea or a flying Dutchman is the amphibious machine of V. C. Gorst that shoots at a mile a minute down the hard beach between Jarvis Landing and Winchester Bay and at a rate of the fastest speed boats over the surface of the Bay. When the baggage auto of the Gorst & Kinney beach line broke down two days ago, the winged automobile was brought forth from its shed and with four men and two trunks aboard, covered the first ten miles in eleven minutes, forded Ten Mile Creek and passed the three passenger machines as though they were standing still. This is the first time that Mr. Gorst has put his new machine actually into the harness. He has intimated that he may perfect his machine for regular use, though the drivers declare that its excessive speed is enough to make even Barney Oldfield wince a bit as it speeds by the briny deep. In shape the machine is the chassis of an automobile on which has been mounted, up high, an 80 horsepower aeroplane engine, the shaft of which communicates with a large flying machine propeller in the rear. On the sides of the amphibious auto are pontoons, air tight, and it is those that keep the machine on the surface whenever it takes a notion to swim. Mr. Gorst believes that he can attain a speed of considerably more than a mile a minute up the beach, but often the auto must be slowed down for turns in the path, or to cross streams, facts that cut down the record time. Yesterday the machine ran across the Bay from Jarvis Landing to Pony Slough and later came forth from the depths for a spin about town somewhat after the fashion of a flying fish. In a few days the animal may be brought to Marshfield for a tour of inspection.
