THE WAR SITUATION

THE SONGS OF YESTERDAY

WERE are the good old songs we sang, the songs of yesterday? When "Sweet Marie," the country rang, and "White Wings" held its sway? And where is "Annie Rooney" now, and where's "Sweet Adeline?" And "Climbing Up the Golden Stairs," we used to think that fine, we sang "Down Went McGinty," and "Two Little Girls in Blue." And "Maggie Murphy's Home" could get an encore out of you. "Sweet Belle Mahone" has passed away; "Good-bye, My Lover, Good-bye," "After the Ball," you'll recollect, once brought tears to your eyes. And where is dear old "Peek-a-Boo," and "Mother Told Me So?" and how we long for "Dear Louise" and charming "Molly O!" Where are the good old songs we sang, the songs that once held sway? Just sing them o'er and feel the pang, the yearn for yesterday.

SMILE-A-WHILE

A SEASON REVERIE.

Somehow I have got the hunch,
That somewhere on the sly,
A speckled beauty of a trout,
Is waiting now to strike my fly.
And though it's early in the year,
Perhaps, as like as not,
Somewhere a fat and frisky deer,
Is waiting to be shot.
—Harry McKeown.

SMILE-A-WHILE

BILL SHOUBE, who was over on Central Avenue the other evening, said he didn't expect to work another day in his life. "Of course not," said Levi Smith, "a night policeman doesn't have to work days."

SMILE-A-WHILE

JUDGE JAMES WATSON (get the JAMES) was in our midst Wednesday. The Judge is one of the most competent and capable jurists on the Oregon bench. He says he has never yet had one of his decisions reversed by the Supreme Court.

SMILE-A-WHILE

DR. E. V. MORROW has gone to join one of the Red Cross hospitals in Europe. Of course he must have The Booster and he says if the censor attempts to delete any of The Booster war bulletins there will be a fresh declaration of hostilities.

SMILE-A-WHILE

JUDGE A. S. HAMMOND was a guest at The Chandler this week but asked us not to mention it in the paper—which we have learned from years of experience means that he will be disappointed if he don't see his name in print when he reads The Booster this week.

SMILE-A-WHILE

J. O. STEMLER, of Myrtle Point, was seen on our street this week. J. O. has been to the San Francisco Fair and says it comes up to the Myrtle Pt. ditto. He says "Frisco is a great city with miles of paved streets and big crowds every day, but that he says is on acct. of the Fair.

SMILE-A-WHILE

MEL DUNCAN, who claims he is only "Sweet Sixteen," was telling the bunch that he was quite bright in his youth, in fact when he was a little boy he could name all the President. "Well," remarked August Frizeen, "when you were a little boy there weren't so many President."

SMILE-A-WHILE

COL. ROSA, the original Bandon booster, was fraternizing with the Central Avenue boosters this week. The Colonel is swinging his 43-centimeter guns into position to battle for the Port of Bandon and when the Col. clears the decks for action there won't be anything left in the trenches of the opposing artillery.

SMILE-A-WHILE

L. A. LILLEQVIST, who upholds the honor and dignity of the State of Oregon as district attorney, was seen on our street recently. He has a fine diamond disc talking machine. L. A. is some talking machine himself, but the diamond disc has to be wound up and stops when run down. He will be buying an automobile next.

A RIDDLE

Why is the best baker always in want of bread?

Because she needs (kneads) it most.

And all good housekeepers need

SMILE-A-WHILE

A War Dream.—Frank Cohan, claims to be the only original and Simon pure neutral on Central Avenue, had a lurid war dream the other night. He dreamed that he was cut in two and half of him was Belgian and the other half German and he was shooting at himself.

SMILE-A-WHILE

Wanted, A Shine.—Dr. A. L. Houseworth drove his auto up in front of The Smokehouse the other day and went in for a cigar. When he came out two men were perched on the seat reading a newspaper. "Do you gentlemen mind telling me what you are doing up there?" he asked. One of them looked over the top of his paper. "Waiting for a shine," he said.

SMILE-A-WHILE

Lost on a Great Avenue.—Central Avenue's last word in being a metropolis happened one day last week, when little Roman Kernbaum walked into Cook's Grocery, made a purchase and started for home. He returned a few moments later and said he was lost. The little fellow's family moved here only about a week ago and he did not remember which one of the four streets he traveled to arrive at the grocery. Will Hennessey came along and tried to pilot him, but did not succeed. Then George began questioning him and succeeded in locating his home at the residence of Mrs. Barnidge. The lad started off cheerily, but Marshfield is a great city to him and Central Avenue a wonderful street. And he is right. E. Tacha is now going to write a story "Lost in a Great City."

SMILE-A-WHILE

TABLES TURNED
I watch the gently flowing stream
Where silver ripples play
Beneath the waters flash and gleam
I knew the fish would play.
I thought of many a prize to make
A rare and tempting dish,
I sat and dreamed, though half awake,
That I was stringing fish.

I looked and saw the finny tribe
Down in the water clear,
Swift circles they would there describe
And to my hook draw near.
I made full many a fervent wish,
They romped in graceful glee,
I dreamed that I was stringing fish.
The fish were stringing me.
