NEW POST MASTER SAYS SCHOOLS GOOD

HUGH McLAIN RECEIVES COMMISSION FOR OFFICE.

William B. Curtis Steps Out Tonight After Almost 17 Years of Efficient Service

At five o'clock tonight William B. Curtis closes sixteen and one-half years of active service as postmaster of Marshfield. Hugh McLain, newly appointed under President Wilson's administration, received his commission yesterday and tonight will check over the books with Mr. Curtis and take charge of the office tomorrow.

street, to its present location. At the start he had only himself and one assistant, "and we played half the time" he adds. Now the office employs a force of eight men and women and has three carriers and two substitutes on the outside.

"When I went into office," said Mr. Curtis, "we had a little room in Front street. Several people in the office at the same time crowded the place."

From there the office was moved to the Bennett & Walter building, then to the Eldorado Block where the First National Bank was first located, then to the old Masonic building on Front street and finally to the corner of Curtis and Broadway.

In the also 17 years the salary of the Postmaster has practically doubled, thus indicating a great increase in the postal receipts. The first salary of Mr. Curtis was $1400 and this has gradually raised to $2400. The postal receipts here for 1914 were $21,188.77.

After his long years of efficient and faithful service Mr. Curtis feels that he is entitled to a rest and says that is exactly what he intends to take despite the fact he will make a trip to the fair later in the year.

Only one change could possibly be made in the personnel of the Post-office force, points out Mr. McLain, the remainder being under the civil service laws. He has a right to appoint his own deputy, but states no change will be made now at least.

SCIENTIFIC APPARATUS IS MOST NEEDED SAYS INSPECTOR

Frank K. Welles, Assistant Superintendent Public Instruction, Comments Coos County Schools

The five high schools of Coos county are on a par with any high schools of the state in cities of their size, says Frank K. Welles, assistant superintendent of public instruction, who left on the boat this morning for Salem after a week inspecting the schools system of the county. After three days in the Coquille Valley he came back last night strong in his praise for the manner in which the patrons have sought to provide apparatus for their buildings.

"Practically every elementary school of the county I found in good condition," said Mr. Welles, "only I noticed a lack of scientific apparatus, especially in the chemistry and physics departments."

He will recommend, on his return to Salem, that certain changes be required of these schools before they are wholly admitted on an accredited basis. Marshfield and North Bend, he said, have excellent equipment, some of the best in the state, and there will probably be no trouble in putting them on a standard basis.

This system of standardization of courses has come about as the result of month of work on the part of the state pedagogues. With the elementary schools with a basis of standardization the movement has spread to the preparatory schools. With this accomplished the state university and agricultural college will hereafter be able to admit graduates from accredited schools without the long entrance examinations.

EVENTS IN COQUILLE

County Seat News Chronicled by The Sentinel

Yesterday Attorney Charles I. Regard filed a petition for letters of administration to be issued to Amelia Volz of North Bend, on the estate of John Volz. The value of the estate is placed at $2800, of which $1,100 is real estate.

R. M. DeWitt, wife and daughter arrived here yesterday. They came from Broken Bow, Oklahoma; and Mr. DeWitt will become a partner of Councilman Ned C. Kelly in the real estate business.

Last Monday County Treasurer Dimmick received a telegram from his son Victor Dimmick, who now lives in Brookings, Curry County, announcing the birth of a baby boy on the morning of that day.

William Pentland, the state's star witness in the Russell poisoning case, was enjoying an outing Tuesday afternoon. He is held at the city jail, but was taken out by Marsal Miller and set to digging up the parking on the Hall street front which it is intended to cover with turf and ornament with roses. Pentland, who is a well-dressed, pleasant appearing young man, did a good job with the spade that day.

VEGETABLE WAGON AGAIN SWAT THE FLY

FARMERS' EXCHANGE WILL PUT ON A DELIVERY Special Wagon to Distribute Home Products Direct From the Farmer to Consumer.

The Farmers' Exchange announced today that they have perfected plans for starting a special delivery wagon service with vegetables, eggs, butter and other ranchers' products in Marshfield next Monday. This butter and other ranchers' products exclusively and will carry fresh vegetables direct from Coos County ranchers to the city consumer.

Geese are fattened for market in some parts of Europe by confining them in dark rooms, to which light is admitted at intervals, causing them to eat seven or eight meals a day.

By the use of a partial vacuum the United States Department of Agriculture has developed a hydrocyanic acid gas process for fumigating imported seed more rapidly than heretofore.

Little pestiferous, buzzing flies that flit about at will through the sugar bowls and the soup dishes aggravating the entire family to the chase with the hue and cry of "Swat the Fly," are with us again. They have already begun their spring pilgrimage from the nearest barnyards and back alleys, from the trash heaps and the garbage cans, each one bringing on each one of his countless legs toes and antennae a million germs and more, aiding to spread a countless number of ills and sicknesses.

And it is now, say the fly experts, that special efforts must be made, early in the spring, to subdue the pest, and there are several means advocated.

School Children Aid.

In some places the school children have become interested in forms of fly traps. These have been known to do a world of good. In other places the campaign has assumed a cleaning up of alleys, of the barnyards where these pupae are residing since last fall and every known place of rubbish in which the female fly of several months ago could have stored a million eggs or so.

That flies can be successfully combated and with a great degree of accuracy and future comfort to the citizens was demonstrated last year in Eugene and several cities of the Willamette Valley. Under the direction of Dr. C. F. Hodge, for 23 years a biologist in Clark University and temporarily at Eugene, the work was carried on. Several times he was called to Portland to aid them there in the big spring fight.

Biology Class at Work.

The biology class of the Eugene High School becoming interested in the problem divided the city into sections. A member or two members of the class were assigned to one of these sections where it was the duty of the student or students to make a map showing every barn yard, the condition of the manure piles, the situation of the garbage cans and to keep watch on how often they were emptied.

Working in this manner several property owners found themselves halled into the police court there to pay fines for either not obeying the order requiring all manure to be placed in boxes, well covered, or for not emptying garbage according to council ordinances.

Fly Traps Do Wonders.

Not only was this done, but fly traps were made in the manual training department of the high school and distributed about the city for almost nothing. Large ones were made for stables, smaller ones for the residences. Many were placed in stores and practically every down town alley had a dozen or more. They did an efficient work.

At the close of the summer Dr. Hodge declared the campaign against the fly in Eugene had accomplished more than any campaign with which he had been interested in twenty years. Flies in Eugene were reduced considerably in numbers and the work is being carried on again this year in the same manner.

The fact that there are 50,000

types of flies is not discouraging is rather the fact that a female can lay about a million eggs. In days or so these have grown into tiny members that buzz about and turn, carry their legs germ laden. Dr. Straw, health officer, has already been before the council declaring that means much to be done to protect the city against the spread of the flies and the mosquitoes recommended that stagnant pools be filled and that alleys and manure piles be watched.

To catch the pesky variety before they have descended in the balance of a black cloud to swoop to bite us the health officer asks everyone follow the common sense precautions, clean up and in every way aid in reducing the number of flies incubate in the fifth of the homes, stores and stables.

"Have you no sense?" "I got a nickel." "A nickel?" "Yes, that's five 'sense." "I'm going to find out what you know."

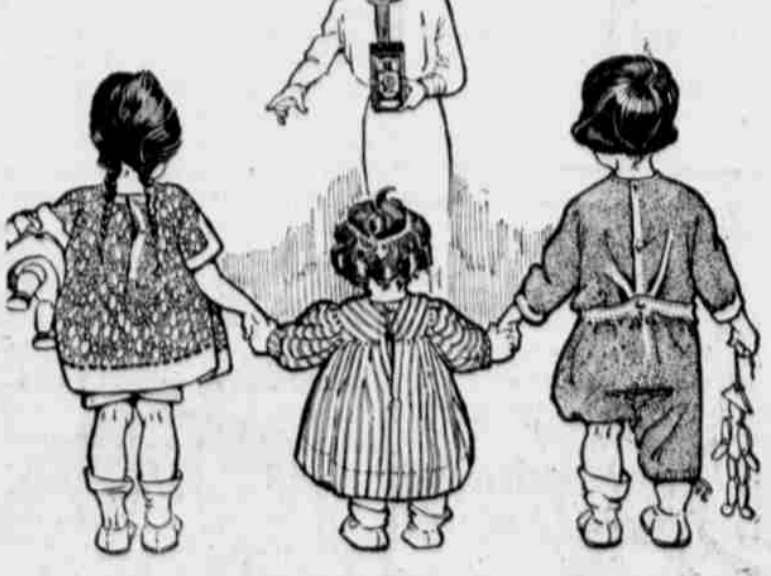

"Start something." "Who was the first man?" "George Washington." "No, sir, it was Adam." "O, well, I wasn't counting on cignors." "I'll give you one last chance. Suppose you bought a dog for $100." "That's a whole lot to pay for a dog." "Never mind about the price, attention." "Yes, I'll pay attention, but won't pay $20 for a dog." "This is a Splitz dog." "I don't care if he splits, but his teeth; I wouldn't pay more for a dog. But suppose I buy him and he goes mad?" "Then shoot him on the spot." "This dog may not have spots."

"Never mind about that." "Say what's the best way to prevent a dog going mad in July?" "Well, what is the best way to prevent a dog going mad in July?" "Shoot him in June."
