

EX-SEN. ALDRICH PASSES AWAY

street tales devoted one whole winter to a study of Aldrich and then wrote a long biography for a popular magazine. The article was profusely illustrated, and a highly colored photograph was used on the outside cover. Naturally the author desired to know what Aldrich thought of the article, and a friend sought to find out. A copy of the magazine was handed to the Senator. He looked at the cover and his face depicted disgust. "I never wore a green waistcoat in my life," he said, and forthwith the offending magazine was thrown into the waste basket.

Born in Foster, R. I., November 6, 1841, he first appeared in public office as member of the Common Council in the city of Providence. He was elected to the Rhode Island Assembly in 1875 and four years later sent to Congress. After two sessions he was elevated to the Senate as successor to General Ambrose E. Burnside.

Having begun his career as a business man, Senator Aldrich continued throughout his public service to display business-like methods and extraordinary capacity for organization. Upon his election to the Senate, he was immediately made chairman of the Committee on Rules, and a member of the Committee on Finance and Interstate Commerce. Later, as chairman of the Finance Committee, he was called upon to assume a large share of the responsibility for all tariff and financial legislation before the Senate. He participated in the preparation of no fewer than six revisions of the tariff and bore the burden of labor incident to them. The Payne-Aldrich tariff act was engineered through the Senate by him after many weeks of skillful maneuvering and hard fighting.

Mr. Aldrich was always ready to seize upon any trend of public business to advance legislative causes in which he was interested. The "bankers' panic" of 1907 enabled him to give impetus to his plan to bring about monetary reforms. The first fruit of his labors in this direction was the Vreeland-Aldrich emergency currency law of 1908, put through the Senate by Aldrich after an historic filibuster directed by La Follette, the Progressive Republican from Wisconsin, who was aided by Mr. Stone, of Missouri, a Democrat. Sharp parliamentary tactics enabled Mr. Aldrich to bring the bill to a final vote, but in taking Mr. La Follette off his feet Mr. Aldrich made an enemy who was relentless in his opposition during many subsequent legislative contests.

The emergency currency law was regarded by Mr. Aldrich as the best remedy possible of speedy enactment, but he did not stop there. He began work immediately upon a more permanent plan of currency reform, giving most of his time to the work of the National Monetary Commission. He was able to devote his time unreservedly to his work because in 1911 he declined to be a candidate for reelection, giving ill-health as a reason.

Mr. Aldrich's friends contended that his efforts to revise the currency system of the country was approached in an absolutely non-partisan way. He was exceedingly anxious that his work should stand up as a monument to his public service. His disappointment was keen when in 1911 his party lost control of the House and took from the Republicans the credit of putting through the far-reaching legislation. Before the political complexion of Congress changed Mr. Aldrich was compelled to admit that his efforts were being frustrated by antagonistic sentiment in the Central West. Then he realized that the attacks he had scorned to answer had taken root. He could not understand that the course he followed through his public career of judging what was best for the state itself was not approved by the people themselves.

Mr. Aldrich then undertook a speech-making trip in the Middle West, with avowed intention of eradicating hostility to himself and his project. He desired especially to convert the people to believe his declaration that he had no purpose save to devise a system of National Finance sound in principle, safeguarding all legitimate interests, and embodying the best wisdom of the entire country. Although he had large audiences of bankers and business men, his mission was far from successful.

"Why is not our plan taken at its face value?" he asked a friend. He received a frank answer.

"You have spent your vacations in Europe. You have not studied the people. Your language is that of the prosperous business man. You are seeking too late in life to know the people."

Mr. Aldrich expressed regret that

RAILROAD "BUBBLE" CAUSE OF FAILURE

J. A. Folger, Financier, Fails to Meet $0,000 Judgment and Wife Has Long Lien on $10,000 Salary.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—J. A. Folger, coffee merchant, is dethroned as one of San Francisco's financial kings, following admissions he made to Justice of the Peace Frank Deasy that he could not meet a judgment for $9,000. Folger testified that all of his wealth had been lost in the Ocean Shore railroad bubble.

Following the Ocean Shore smash he had to borrow large sums from his wife, he declared, and she has a long lien on his salary of $10,000 a year. Mrs. Folger is said to keep a regular set of books showing the transactions between her husband and herself. These books will be produced in court.

WAS ASLEEP ON BICYCLE.

Messenger Boy Rides for Two Hours Deep in Slumber.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 15.—When a call came into the Western Union office recently to send a messenger boy to the Deming Hotel, Robert Leonard, who was asleep, was awakened and sent on his bicycle. The Deming Hotel is two blocks from the Western Union office. When the boy failed to appear about half an hour later another boy was sent out. Robert appeared two hours later at his home with his bicycle. He rapped on the door and his mother let him in to find him sound asleep. He had been riding about the city two hours when asleep.

he had not earlier made opportunity to acquaint himself with the Western people. He said: "In a way I have been familiar with western interests and have done all I could to protect them, but I feel that I could have been of still greater help if I had familiarized myself on the ground with your institutions and your people."

After his retirement from public life Mr. Aldrich spent much of his time in travel, but he continued to follow business affairs. He saw many of his ideas on the subject of currency enacted by the Democrats and although the new law did not bear his name, it is known to a large extent he approved of what was done.

SWEDISH BOAT LINE

THREE BIG STEAMER LINES TO PACIFIC COAST

Will Commence Operations Within Three Weeks—Steamer Freight From Chicago

(Special Dispatch.) OAKLAND, April 16.—That the opening of the Panama Canal soon will mean an enormous increase in ocean freights is definitely shown in announcements by steamship companies that in the near future Oakland will be made a port of call for their vessels.

The first is that of three big steamer lines controlled by Scandinavian capital, which will operate a fleet of vessels from Copenhagen, Christiania and Goteburg, Sweden, to the Pacific coast. The information came from Harold Gybwed, of Christiania, now in California collecting commercial data. Gybwed represents the firm of Storm Bull, Limited, big manufacturers and ship owners, and he said the first of the steamers would start from Christiania in three weeks. All will dock at Oakland on their way to the northern Pacific coast ports.

A second announcement that means much to California came by telegraph to an Oakland firm from Chicago. It stated that officers of the Chicago, St. Louis Gulf Transportation Company will early in May begin the shipment of freight from Chicago to Oakland by way of the Gulf of Mexico and the Panama Canal.

The eastern freight is to be sent from Chicago by rail to La Salle, Ill., and there placed on barges, which will carry it to the mouth of the Mississippi River, where it will be loaded into ocean steamships. These vessels, after making calls at all important points, steam northward and discharge their cargoes at Oakland's municipal wharves.

The "Don't Need To" Theory

IN A RECENT debate at Havana, Mistah John Johnson failed to convince Mr. Willard. Some few years ago Mr. Johnson surmounted the color line and was the leading man in his line of work. Business was good and profits were high.

Having all the money he could handle at the time, he concluded to take a rest.

To be sure he planned to get into the field again at the proper time.

But everything was rosy and there really seemed no good and sufficient reason why he should spend so many hours a day keeping his muscles lithe and strong and his wind good and his heart and nerves in trim.

Eventually the meeting with Mr. Willard was arranged. Mr. Johnson was still tolerably content with what he had done.

(Brother, a has-done is about as bad as a has-been.)

Mr. Johnson did not care to stand up in the training ring and punch and take punches. He did not see the necessity of practicing side steps and feints and rushes.

He knew all about them. Why he had done all of that he ever needed to do.

Mr. Willard did not overlook the boxing and the wrestling and the clinching and the side-stepping, etc.

As a result, Mr. Johnson received Mr. Willard's compliments to the point of the jaw, and his business career closed.

Advertising a business is the training of that business.

Advertising keeps a business healthy.

It tones up its liver, strengthens its biceps, steadies its heart and keeps its nerves in order.

Once in awhile a man decides that he is doing so much business that he can stop advertising for a while and run on momentum.

Momentum is the gradual process toward a full stop.

The momentum business is usually prematurely full-stopped by the straight left jabs of the well-trained competitor who finds his opening in the 26th round.

If you want to stay in business stay in the advertising field.

No matter how much business you are doing, keep up the energy that makes it.

You might as well cut off your legs because you are running well in a foot race, as to cut off your advertising because your business will continue without it.

You might as well tell the insurance man that you are so healthy you will drop the policy for a few years as to stop advertising because business goes on without it.

"Don't need to" is the eventual preliminary to "Can't do it."

The only man who doesn't need to advertise is the man who has retired from business.

The only policy holders who doesn't need to pay his premiums is dead.

Mr. Johnson doesn't need to train any more. He is licked.
