ADVERTISE IT NOW

B USINESS men who curtail ador who cease advertising altogether because business doesn't justify it, ought to be interested in the

"That a fine idea our western friends are boosting-the 'buy it now' plan,

"But in sales and advertising circles I consider that the words need translation-they should read 'Ad vertise it now.'

"My own say-so about this has the support of an international financial authority, Roger Babson. He makes clear that advertising is a cycle of time in advance, and if the slack time is made the signal that the boy wants to play all the not to cut, but to add to advertising pressure.

"Advertise it now!

"It's when the factory needs work that advertising is an investment to prevent loss on fixed charges. When a factory like Ford's, is choked with orders, then, like Ford, it's not poor business to slacken advertising. Certainly Ford, as well as the manufacturer without orders, who both quit advertising, can't both be right.

"A reserve fund or new capital to build a new factory or raise salaries is not nearly so important as a reserve fund or new capital to invest in advertising during lean times. At such times it bears a double value-increased power during special need for the present, and increased pull for future good will.

"Advertise it now!

"Every factor is primed now to more alas! institute a movement nation-wide among business men to recognize the which flows from prior start in establishing good will.
