

THE CENTRAL AVENUE BOOSTER

CENTRAL AVENUE, FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1912

No. 38

PERSONAL MENTION.

CHURCH, the good looking clerk of "The Owl," has the doctor's permission to return the patches he borrowed for the occasion and will soon be back on duty.

HORSFALL, our busy p. & s., says that if fresh air will make the hair grow, he will soon have a crop that will make an irritated alfalfa patch look like a hand dune.

BOOSTER WAR BULLETINS

The following was forwarded from California, but the date is blurred or has been deleted by the censor:

"I do not fear you, Sengstacken. No matter where you fire. The Marshfield Hardware is protected.

With lots of good screen wire. —J. T. Harrigan

THE NIGHT BEFORE BOOSTER DAY

Blessings on thee, Thursday night! For that's the time we needn't write, But gave us the awful pain Of appealing to our brain, How much easier to paste Others writings than to waste Time and thought on stuff that's sure To be just as good, or poor, As the bunk that we might pen. So I say, and say again; Blessings on thee, Thursday night, When we do not have to write, But take the things others indite. Literature heavy and poetry light, Ed. Meade's poems, Cohan's jokes; 'Gene Crosthwaite's stories of other folks; Fred Weaver's quips, George Cook's jest; Ivy Condon's always best. Sengstacken's swipes at Harrigan's hopes And the things that Al. Neff dopes. All these come in Thursday's mail And are welcome than kale, Because on the calendar it's one bright ray The night before it's Booster Day. SMILE-A-WHILE

BASE BALL BATTER

You probably have not warmed up to the war between the Boosters and the Waifs, but there will be some hot stuff when 'Gene Crosthwaite gives his chill con carne banquet.

AN EXPERT

It is a well known fact that with lean and anxious face He doth declare: "Pray tell me where They have this baseball race?"

SMILE-A-WHILE

And Dillard pulls his bunk? It gives me cheer to sit and hear A lot of clever junk."

"Alas!" quoth I, "This here poor guy Is gone beyond all hope. You must be queer to sit and cheer When Dillard springs his dope."

"It gives me cheer to sit and hear" The fan man doth aver "Because my name has a greater fame As an Annanias, sir."

HE WANTS A JOB (Received by 'Gene Crosthwaite, Manager of the Central Avenue Boosters.)

Riverton, April 28, 15.

"Dear Sir: I want a job to play of the baseball team from Central Avenue Boosters. I want to sign when are you send the write a letter to me soon. I was leading the infield on averages 200 and I run home in averages 9. I am 23 years old and I am weight the 135. I tell you send more salary how much it for me. I am a little deaf and I can speak the hear.

"Write soon real. Your friend,

Jitney Joy-Riders.—Front Street personages (lawyers included,) were noticed on the avenue availing themselves of the low-fare Jitney service to Coquille. Some street, this avenue!

CENTRAL AVENUE SAYINGS

Safety First.—No motorcycle accidents were reported this week.

A Dastardly Deed.—Some fiend in human form made off with Charley Cumber's car yesterday. Have you looked in the clock among the milk tickets, Charley?

Good News.—The Booster is glad to state that Dorsey Kretzer, our Central Avenue banker, is rapidly improving. Which is as good news to us as the prospects of a Republican landslide a year from November.

A New Store.—We are glad to report to our readers the addition of a complete furniture store to our shopping center. With it comes a Harry Collins for Gene's ball team. Speed Woods, another hit. Score it up, Umps. With Umpire Kimball's aid, Gene's success of a second McGraw seems assured.

Welcome! Harry.—Harry Nabura, who has long been close to Central Avenue, has finally concluded to take the final step and will pack up his grocery stock, fresh fruit included, and move into the Russell building, Second and Central, next week. Welcome to our midst, Harry, we'll be around for an ad next week.

Honor Central Ave.—Honors continue to pour like liquid sunshine on Central Avenue. D. Y. Stafford, one of the original Booster band, has just been elected president of the Millcooma Club. The honor came unsought and unexpected but the wreath of glory could find no fitter brow in all the world than Dave's. Congrats, Dave, and here's our hand on it.

Financial Conditions.—The financial condition is rapidly improving. Ye editor floated a five-cent loan (not a five per cent), this week without giving a note or a mortgage on Col. Grime's new building. However, he had to take it in the nature of one of Gene Crosthwaite's cigars. After making use of the same, he is firmly convinced that the government ought to be more active in prosecuting promoters for watering their stock.

Another Councilman on Central. George Cook, the Central Avenue pioneer, can no longer boast of the honor of being the only Central Avenue Alderman. City Father Harry Kimball this week returned from Nebraska to find that in absence his office had been moved into the Russell building. And when it comes to boosting, Harry always makes a hit. We did not mean this for a pun even if Harry is some baseball umpire and fan.

Real Estate Center.—G. W. Kaufman, who has long trod Central Avenue back and forth between his home and the office (before the days of the jitney bus), has grown tired of elbowing his way through the throng. This week the Kaufman company moved into fine offices in the Russell building, firmly establishing the real estate market center in our midst. Al Myers may claim that he is the center, being between the Sengstacken and Kaufman offices, but ye editor considers them collectively.

SMILE-A-WHILE

JESS TERRELL, our pop. tonorial artist, is taking an enforced vacation as a result of the skin on his left thumb being worn thin from making change, the fore part of the week. There are always drawbacks to becoming metropolitan. Jitney bus money for instance. And then to think that some Front street competitor of Jess's was downright ornery enough to start a story to the effect that his injury was due to throwing saw-logs at a neighbor's chickens in his garden.

GUS KNELSON, OF O. P. R. HAS THRILLING EXPERIENCE

Timber Inspector Falls Into Water That is Nine Feet Deep and Rescued by George Graham.

(Wireless to The Booster.)

GARDINER, Or., April 30.—Your special correspondent here has just learned of a thrilling experience that befell—that is, that he befell—meaning that Gus Knelson, the well-known and pop. timber inspector fell into nine feet of water from a log boom in this city recently.

He struggled like a hero. But he never learned to swim. And it looked so very quickly. As if it would all be up, with him.

Just then George Graham grabbed him and dragged him dripping from the dripping depths. In the absence of a pulmonator they applied Fred Aasenheimer's hot aeromotor with such excellent results that Gus Knelson can now take a half-nelson on anyone. George Graham's success as a life-saver may get him a place on Bert Peterson's crew. Everybody here says: "Let George do it."

That's all for this time. I will try and gather together more Gardiner news next week.

EXAMINATION IN PHARMACY

"I have been thinking," remarked Frank Cohan at The Owl this morning, "that the examinations for pharmacy clerks are not at present practical. They ask questions that seldom or never come up in actual business while questions that do come up are overlooked."

As a result of experience he submits a list that came up every day.

1. Got any stamps?
2. If I leave Marshfield in the morning, will I get to Roseburg in time to catch the train that makes connections in Portland for the Limited in Spokane?
3. Where can I get a jitney to First Addition?
4. May I use your telephone?
5. Have you a directory of Marshfield?
6. What time is it?
7. Will you look up a number for me in your telephone directory?
7. What's the best thing to take the grease spots out of crepe de chine?
9. What's at the Movies tonight?
10. Does Chocolate really make you fat?

"But while he will not find the answer to these in text books on pharmacy, the druggist soon finds out that these are the things that break the monotony of the business," philosophically concluded Frank as he handed out a few matches to light the cigar that the Booster reporter purloined from the pocket of Harry McKeown who was absorbing the wisdom. Some absorber, Harry!

This is the first interview our reporter has been able to obtain from our busy druggist since the loss of his clerk.
