PROMINENT PORTLAND MAN VISITS SON HERE

Looks for Early Improvement in Business Conditions Throughout the Country

That rivalry between the interests of the Macleay estate and those of B. A. Seaborg is likely to be strong this salmon season in the Rogue River is the belief of a party of three who returned Saturday evening from a visit there. They were Tom James, Frank Catterlin, Charles Curtis, and J. Q. Jarvis. At the present time the Seaborg cannery, about to open operations, is closed down with the clamp of the law, an injunction having been issued last week. There are several fishing boats in the river waiting to fish for the Seaborg cannery it is stated.

Leaving here in the Roamer the men were the guests of Captain Skog down the coast. Coming in on the heels of the same nor'wester that "belayed" the Nann Smith the gasoline schooner tossed about at a lively rate though the passengers praise the little craft for her seaworthiness.

On the return trip the men say they made record time for this season of the year. A boat took them in and there they got an auto stage and connected with the stage of Dick Richards up from Bandon on the coast road. There were nine persons in the Ford machine and the party came through without being stuck. They left at 5 a. m. and arriving at Marshfield at 7 p. m.

The scenic beauties of the Rogue River have never been told enough, declared the travelers. Fish they said, were plenty and practically every meal found messes on the table. Aboard the Roamer Tom James demonstrated his cooking ability by fixing a clam chowder. He states authentically that the crew and the friends gathered round and ate every "drop."

A visit was paid to the salmon cannery of the Wedderburn Trading Company where the Chinooks are now being canned. One hundred and fifty were caught the day the men visited there.

Tom James spoke of the big equipment that is carried on land there. In one room of the cannery, for instance, there is $30,000 worth of labels alone. The big general store there is large enough to supply the county.

Many Coos Bay people are planning on spending their vacations in Curry County. Several have stated they expect to take their camping outfits with them and take the journey on easy stages.

J. Q. Jarvis visited Gold Beach for the purpose of looking over the drug store of R. E. Knorr which is for sale. He has not definitely decided to buy.

FISHING PARTIES George Rotnor and Grover Williamson and some friends motored out to Brewster yesterday for a little outing. They report the roads in fairly good condition. Many Coquille autoists spent the day there.

R. H. Corey, Dr. Taggart and R. T. Kaufman also motored out to Brewster Valley yesterday.

BOAT DAMAGED. The Bandon Western World says: "Running onto a snag in the river just above Cedar point while on the return trip to Bandon from Coquille, the steamer Telegraph sprang a leak and was forced to return to Coquille, where she was beached and the passengers taken off."

REV. AND MRS. JOSEPH KNOTTS and son left this morning for a three weeks at Lafayette, Oregon, the home of Mrs. Knotts' parents.
