CENTURY OF CIVILIZATION

ONE HUNDRED YEARS ago today the battle of Waterloo was fought. It was on June 18, 1815. Today two great armies are gripped in a death struggle on practically the same ground fighting as they were a century ago for supremacy to be gained by force of arms.

MORE CARE NEEDED

TWO little boys were badly injured on account of playing with dynamite caps. The little fellows touched a match to one and it exploded, ruining one boy's hand and causing a fracture of the skull with the other.

THE ARM CHAIR WARRIOR

THE citizens of South Mansfield, Louisiana, evident bored by Co. Roosevelt's reiterated fire eating against the Lusitania affair and the strained German-American situation, ation, sent that belligerent gentleman the following telegram, according to the New York Times: "South Mansfield, La., May 11, 1915.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Syracuse, N. Y.; Judging from the statement of yours at Syracuse that you have the fighting spirit, we, the citizens of this village, will furnish you and transportation for you to join either the Allied or German forces individually—no substitutes.

"Citizens of South Mansfield." Col. Roosevelt wired in reply: "Syracuse, N. Y., May 12, 1915.—Citizens of South Mansfield, La. If your citizens who addressed the telegram to me volunteer to join and accompany me to Europe we will join the Allied forces, purchasing our arms from your city and starting immediately from South Mansfield."

But this was not the intention of the citizens of South Mansfield. Their thought was not to become belligerents themselves but merely to relieve the nation, and incidentally South Mansfield, of the clamor of the Rooseveltian braggadocio and the clatter of his bombast and to his offer they telegraphed this second message:

"South Mansfield, La., May 15, 1915.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Syracuse N. Y.; Get the meaning of the former message. You to go unaccompanied. We are for peace; you do the fighting, and our offer still holds good.

"Citizens of South Mansfield, La." At last reports no further word had been received in South Mansfield from Col. Roosevelt. Whether he sensed the loneliness that must come from life in the trenches, where the coldhearted censor, unfeelingly darkens the personal spot light, or shuddered at the thought of having to shoulder the plebian rifle instead of waving the glittering, aristocratic sword that second message seems to have accomplished the miracle of smiting the colonel dumb.

South Mansfield may or may not have been in earnest but it has at least pointed the way for other communities which may be afflicted with such superlative jingoos as Col. Roosevelt. Just as South Mansfield is for peace, so is every community in the United States peaceably inclined. But even in the most peaceable community there is always to be found some loud-mouthed radical born with a theory that noise is argument and that violence either of word or action, is unanswerable.

They talk large, these arm chair warriors, and are bloodthirsty while the nation is at peace. But let the nation go to war and they usually are the ones who respond to no patriotism but conscription. There is no law to silence them. South Mansfield has found the only rejoinder to their ravings. If every community would appropriate a sum of money to buy passage and equipment for the European war those who afflict them America would speedily see the clan fade from the earth.

WITH THE TOAST AND THE TEA

GOOD EVENING

And remember this. Yesterday's successes belong to yesterday, with all of yesterday's defeats and sorrows. The day is here. The time is now.—Elbert Hubbard.

LURE OF THE OPEN

You know the way it gets you 'til You cannot work or rest Because the call of out-of-doors Makes tumult in your breast.

It gets you at the office and It follows you right home. This whisper of the summer time that Invites you forth to roam.

Where little streams are laughing down Through wooded dells to make The world more rich with music e'er They vanish in the lake.

And dancing waves are waiting to Bear forth boat or canoe To where the noon-day camp-fire smoke Floats upward to the blue.

These are the things that haunt your heart, And many more you know, Make up the call that summons you To just break loose and go. —Anon.

Some Coos Bay men are so broad minded that they can't tolerate the narrow-minded blockheads who disagree with them.

If a man is a financial success, people overlook the means that made him so.

If the thing a Coos Bay man wants to do is right he goes and does it. If it is wrong he consults an attorney.

It's a safe bet that the Coos Bay man who barely escapes being run over by an automobile doesn't call the driver a chauffeur.

Of course your neighbor has his faults, but you should have enough self control not to mention them.

When you are looking for an opportunity on Coos Bay it often misses the steamer—and the wires are usually down.

The vials of wrath are frequently poured out in family jars.
