BORN, NOT CREATED

MHERST COLLEGE is going to establish a chair of common sense, and $100,000 is to be put aside in support of the same. Just what the curriculum will be is not declared, but it may be suggested in advance that common sense is not school taught, and it may be doubted if any amount of college work can add to or subtract from that quality in an individual student.

WITH THE TEA AND THE TOAST

Opportunity to do good is the greatest preference which a humble heart does desire.—Thomas Fuller.

VAIN QUEST

When weary with our business cares, Of telling petty social fibs, Of tickling buyers in the ribs, Of building or of tearing down Our reputation or the town— Say, wouldn't it be more than grand To hit the trail for babyland?

To sit and wonder why the moon Came out at night and not at noon, To speculate if shining stars Were headlights for celestial cars, To watch the gaudy butterfly On wings of light go flitting by, To shovel in the shining sand As tollers do in babyland.

Or at the evening hour to sit Where shadows from the fireplace fit And hear the story, ever new, Of Cinderella and her shoe, Of Jack the Killer, strong and true, Who such ferocious giants slew; Of Robin Hood's alluring band, The pride of folks in babyland?

Alas, it never can be thus! It isn't in the cards for us. That time has gone away for keeps, In memory's little crib it sleeps. We listen as the echo sings, Then turn our mind to other things, Then wouldn't it be mighty grand To take a trip to babyland?

What the country needs is fewer orators and more listeners.

If the world doesn't understand a man it always calls him a crook.

One rarely sees an old man who is afflicted with self conceit.

Fish are wise. They begin business on a small scale.

A man's wisdom isn't as interesting as a woman's intuition.

QUESTION FOR THE DAY

What has become of the old-fashioned mother who named her daughter Mary Ann?

A Coos Bay man never forgets a kindness done—when he does it himself.

The Lord doesn't much use P.T.A. cheerful siver who gives nothing but advice.

A Coos Bay man may be a good judge of other things but it isn't safe to let him make a ruling in the matter of his own importance.

THE LAW OF SALVAGE

BEACHCOMBERS CAN'T KEEP FINDINGS.

Marshfield Attorney Quin Law and Court Decisions in the Case of Shipwrecked Property.

Marshfield, Ore., July 19, 1915. I read your paper this morning and was glad to find an article which has been published at the time of its publication, which Captain MacGoun of the S. S. Sloop Breakwater criticized the law relating to salvage as I gave it in the newspapers on request at the time of the wreck of the Claremont, or her undertook to dispute the validity of any such law, and those questions are constantly recurring in a district located on the ocean coast, the following may be of interest to your readers, both as substantiating the law as I then gave it to you, and as a guide to the public in the event of any future unfortunate occurrences of like nature.

Salvors are expected to exhibit great good faith in their dealings with the subject of their work. The courts treat them with favor when this element is present and are correspondingly severe when it is not. They must deal very honestly with the property, and have no right to appropriate any of it to their own use. The best course is to promptly surrender it to the court under a libel for salvage.

The law protects their right to compensation by a maritime lien which has no relation to possession and which can only be displaced by an admiralty sale or their own laches in enforcing it.

Practice in salvage cases occasionally brings one in contact with some of the very primitive notions of law. One of these is the idea that the finder of wrecked property becomes its owner, or that such property is subject to appropriation by the first occupant.
