BERRIES IN COOS

ty, but the local market is limited forefathers." and owing to the distances from the locality and yield enormously. These ingeniously dressed up to resemble NEWPORT - Charles Flowers, held a big reunion at the home of enough for families to devote their entire efforts toward the cultivation of a berry crop. The growing of small fruits can be carried out on hill lands and much of the land which is not now put to use, and as the business does not require any great capital it would open an opportunity for the man of small means who wants to settle on land. The chance for a big business in this line has several times lately been pointed out by this paper.

THE NEWSPAPER'S RESPON-SIBILITY

IN AN address delivered before the . recent International Press Congress in San Francisco, Mr. Percy Andreae of Chicago, vice-president of the American Association of For- A little bit of effort, a little bit of eign Language Newspapers, struck a very high note as to the responand its place as an educator of pub-He sentiment.

He asserted his belief that the paramount function of the press of today was to act as keeper of the public conscience. "This is no mere metaphor," he continued. "There never was a time when men as well as women were so floreely intent upon appealing to the public conscience and assuming to speak in its name. And who is to distinguish, amid this babel of tongues wagging in the name of the public conscience, which voice is truly the voice of the people and which is not?

"It is the incessant conflict between the contrary winds of alleged public opinion that does more lasting damage in our day than even those colossal social upheavals which occasionally result from the clashing Interests of race and race. Not because the conflict of human opinions is in itself injurious, for we know that it is not, but because, when opinions, however honest, manquerade To keep the spirit beating when the in a false guise, they are misleading. and perplex and bewilder the public conscience instead of clarifying and strengthening it.

"Who, then, is better qualified than the trained and experienced newspaper editor, to point the distinction between the mere passing the real storm-wind that originates in the public mind itself, scarching it to its uttermost depths, and giving it a new and lasting shape?"
