Has Lots of Truth

Not commenting on the recent large shipment of mail order catalogues sent to Roseburg by a mail order house, to be distributed from this point as a central zone, the Salem Capitol Journal does not miss the mark very much in the following article, taken from that paper. There is no longer any question about the results received from careful, persistent, honest and continued advertising, with frequent changes and quoted prices. Constant publicity, keeping in the limelight, letting people who buy know what you have to sell and the prices at which it can be bought, this is the true secret of bringing and holding patronage. Get the people coming your way, treat them fair, make a reasonable profit, and the rest is easy and it is up to the merchant himself to make good. The Journal says: "The mail order house of Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago, a concern which next to the Ford Motor Company, disbursed the largest dividends in the country is going after Oregon business hard. Two car loads of their catalogues have just arrived at Roseburg to be mailed there by parcel post to people living in the several counties of southern Oregon. They began this plan last year in order to take advantage of the zone system of the parcel post charges. There is no question but the large mail order houses are making business dull for the merchants of many small towns, and by draining the country of money retarding its advancement, but it does little good to preach against the mail order evil. They go out after the trade and get it, quite frequently because the home merchant is too sleepy to even advertise in his local paper. The people of his community actually do not know his stock or the prices he puts upon his goods, because he fills his shelves and warehouse and expects people to come and look for what they want. The mail order houses and the city department stores go out to the people with the message of the bargains they have to offer in the newspapers, or through catalogues, and they keep everlastingly at it. Too many local merchants sit down and kick over conditions brought about by the big city competition instead of going out and trying to remedy conditions by getting the right kind of goods at the right prices and making that fact known through approved methods of advertising."
