COOS COUNTY HAS SOME LARGE CROPS

G. A. Henry Demonstrates That Corn and Alfalfa Sillage Crops Can be Grown Successfully

G. A. Henry, one of the progressive dairymen of Dew Valley, is successfully demonstrating that corn and alfalfa can be grown for silage to good advantage in this section. Samples of these two products taken from Mr. Henry's place are on display at the Western World office. One stalk of green corn is eight feet high. It was taken from a quarter acre patch, planted June 15th, and is not yet tasseled out. The alfalfa sample (third cutting) is three feet and nine inches high. Alfalfa growing is somewhat of an experiment in Coos County. Mr. Henry has three acres seeded down and is highly pleased with the crop harvested so far this season. He says it grows rapidly killing out all other vegetation, including clover which he had seeded with the alfalfa.—Bandon World.

MYRTLE POINT MAN HAS ODD ACCIDENT

E. R. Jones, Former Bridge School Teacher, So Stunned that He Can't Remember What Happened

The Barklow and Davidson camping party returned fore part of the week from Curry county where they attended the Agate Carnival at Port Orford. E. R. Jones of Roseburg, who taught school at Bridge last winter, was one of the party, and he had quite a remarkable experience. In fact, it is probably as mysterious as it is remarkable in that some of the happenings are not accounted for as yet. The four horses belonging to the party strayed away and the men and boys struck out in search going in different directions. Mr. Jones came up the road toward Langlois and found the horses near Denmark. Once after getting about three miles from Denmark the animals got away from Jones. He recaptured them again and headed for camp at Port Orford. About four miles from camp Victor and Reuben Stevens of the party met Mr. Jones and he had the appearance of having seen some rough usage; had a big bump on one side of his head, and was in a dazed condition, so much so that he could not at the time tell where he was or where he got the horses.

The boys helped Jones into camp and about an hour later when he came to his full senses it was found that his purse and money were missing. Mr. Jones cannot recall what happened to cause the bruises and bump on his head. Other members of the party say an auto went up the road some time before they met Jones. He cannot remember meeting any car and it is very probable that the horses saw the machine before Jones did and, becoming frightened, threw him to the ground or against a tree in such a way that the fall hurt his head.

While it will probably always be a mystery, how it happened, Jones and his friends are all glad he was not more seriously hurt.—Myrtle Point Enterprise.

WHOPPER OF FISH STORY FROM CURRY

J. R. Stannard and Friends Claim Salmon Jumped Into Boat on Rogue River

The Gold Beach Globe says: "While fishing in Rogue River on Sunday, J. R. Stannard had a peculiar experience. He was trolling and had caught two fine large chinooks and was just contemplating when his boat was struck with great force nearly upsetting it, accompanied with a big noise behind him. He reached for his life-preserver and at the same time looked to what was happening, and lo, and behold a very large Chinook salmon had leaped into the boat. Mr. Stannard immediately pulled for shore, looking behind him at frequent intervals to be sure that the salmon like a flock of sheep, "one go all go" did not overload his boat and sink it. This is not a fish story. This is a true account and Mr. Stannard had about 20 witnesses on shore and in other boats to corroborate his statement. At first it was thought by a Globe reporter that the story might be the vapourings of an imagination superinduced by indulgence in the "cup that cheers" but a thorough examination showed Mr. Stannard to be perfectly sober."

CUTS FERRY CABLE

The County ferry at Bullards was operated under difficulties last Sunday, the steamer Brooklyn having severed the cable in passing down the river about 10 o'clock in the morning. Numerous teams and autos were waiting to pass and they finally persuaded the ferryman to operate without a cable, using a small gas boat. The first load was started across and but for the timely assistance of another small gas boat would have landed on the flats several hundred feet up the river.—Bandon World.

BLAMES BOOZE FOR ROGUE CUTTING SCRAPE

Dan Conner, Who Assaulted Engineer Colvin of the Rustler Well Know Character

(Special to The Times)
GOLD BEACH, Ore., Aug. 30.—Dan Conner, the man who cut Dave Colvin of the gasoline schooner Rustler, with a knife and inflicted a wound on the latter's face, is quite a well known character in this locality. Conner made no denial of what he had done and pleaded guilty but he said that he did not remember much about it an that there was only one explanation—too much booze. The particular brand which caused the trouble is said to have been hard cider but anyway Conner says he was crazed with drink.

The old man has the sympathy of many in Gold Beach as he is well known and well liked. Conner is about 60 years old, has white hair and is over six feet tall and more of an athlete than most young men. He has been a miner and a fisherman on the coast for many years and has been located at different points but most of the time in later years he has been on the Rogue river. He has several mining claims and has this year been fishing.

Typical of the old school miner and fisherman one could not find a better fellow than Dan. He is generous and kindly to his friends and the many who have enjoyed his hospitality were sorry to see him in trouble. But when he drinks he becomes unmanageable and it was while in this condition that he attacked the other man.
