FEAR TURK TROOPS ISSUES OF THE WAR

GERMAN OFFICERS ON GUARD LEST THEY BE KILLED. ENGLISH SUFFRAGETTES WANT RIGHTS IN GERMANY.

Porte's Police Department Increases Its Surveillance—German Attache Found Slain. CONSTANTINOPLE, (By Courier to Dedeagatch and thence by mail), Sept. 4.—More and more, as the existence of the empire becomes menaced more and more does the Turkish police department and the one and only department of government for which the Turk has ever shown a real generous increase its activities. Today the Turks say they have a million and a quarter men under arms. One would be tempted to believe they were referring to the number of policemen.

Always Being Watched. Recently complaint was made to Enver Pasha that there was too much surveillance of the Scorpion, the United States station ship now anchored in the Bosphorus at the foot of the American College for Girls. "But it is the duty of the policemen to watch everything, to watch everybody", replied the 33-year-old minister of war. "Every 20 minutes of the day and night a patrol boat passes my house. I am watched like all the rest." This sensation of being constantly under the eyes of the police produces on the part of the foreigner here a degree of caution. He never knows at what instance a chance word which he may utter may be overheard by a secret policeman and in consequence of which he may be charged with the utterance of treason.

A Turkish Murder. Only a few days ago Colonel Leipzig the military attache of the German embassy was killed. He was a magnificent type of the German officer, over six feet tall, a gentleman both in appearance and in actuality, known and loved by everyone. The official announcement said that while changing from uniform to civilian dress in a little railway station upon his return from the Dardanelles, his revolver had been accidentally discharged, the ball entering his forehead.

Hard at Home. The men left behind had to work double shifts to support the men at the front. Every man in the fighting line needs two or three men and women at home to keep him supplied with all he needs in the way of equipment, munitions and food. The women have not been behind the men in recognizing their duty. By alleviating distress and checking want of employment in the first months of the war. Then when this phase of the national situation was changed and the government demand for war work was so great that unemployment ceased the duty of women changed also. Trained women of course had flocked from the first in their thousands to their posts as nurses and doctors, and this also from every part of the empire. The death rate among the wounded, and deaths from disease have been astonishingly small in this war, thanks to efficient medical and commissariat organization, and above all, excellent nursing. In these things women have had the privilege of doing their part.

Where Women Aid. The hospitals officered entirely by women and orderlies, as well as nurses, with women doctors, nurses, have been one of the new things in this war. The society with which I am connected, the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, has sent out to France and Serbia many of these women's hospital units. We are now responsible for more than 1900 beds and the sum subscribed already exceeds $250,000. Our women doctors have earned the very highest praise from the military and medical authorities under whom they have worked. Lord Methuen wrote of the unit which visited Malta: "They leave here blessed by myself, surgeons, nurses and patients alike, for they have proved themselves most capable and untiring workers."

What the Issue Is. The issue in this war is, in the words of the prime minister, "Is right or is force to dominate mankind?" The tremendous tragedy with which we were suddenly confronted 12 months ago has had the effect upon us, if I may use the expression of correcting the value in our lives. We now love "passing things passingly and lasting things lastingly," much more surely than we did 12 months ago. Every one of us in our person, or in the persons of those near and dear to us has looked death in the face at close quarters. Trifles we now recognize as trifling. The great things in life are doubly sacred. We have been brought up against the real thing, and the deepest of all realities. I think the prayer of each of us is: "God help us to be worthy of the shows no cases where there has been great times in which we live."

Army Grew Fast. Amid much that is terrible and depressing in the last 12 months, this stands out a bright, clear, shining light. Our small army of a few hundred thousand has become an army of three million recruited from the best blood and all ranks, not in the spirit of bravado and jingoism but in the spirit of solemn, and at the same time, joyful, self-dedication. Those who have seen our men at the front have no words to express their admiration for them, their cheerfulness, their heroism, their absolute unselfishness.

It is Not True. The story that soldiers from the South of France lack courage is no doubt a slander. General Joffre comes from Rivesaltes, in the Pyrenees; General Gallieni from Saint-

SAYS FRENCH BRAVE

RIVALRY BETWEEN NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN TROOPS. Strong Feeling Between Two Districts of Country Being Wiped Out by Prolonged War.

PARIS, France, Sept. 4.—Northern France accuses Southern France of lacking courage, or possessing a yellow streak, of talking a whole lot and doing little in the way of slaughtering Germans. Since the very commencement of the war stories have been going the rounds concerning the behavior of certain regiments, said regiments being recruits in the Mid-Southern France. Boiled down these stories have it that these regiments turned and fled in disorder immediately they found themselves under fire; that this happened more than once but that the guilty regiments had been badly punished. Is it true that Frenchmen from Southern France make bad soldiers? To the neutral observer this would not appear true for four of France's greatest generals hail from that corner of the country. These are General Joffre, General Gallieni, General Foch and General Castelnau.

Hate Each Other. Between Northern and Southern France there has always been a feud, not unlike that which exists—or did exist—between the north and south in the United States. So far as outsiders are concerned, France is France without distinction as to the particular part of the country one claims as home. But among themselves the northerner looks down on the southerner and vice-versa; both claim to be the real and true French both the speakers of the purest tongue; both claim chivalry as their own particular birthright and so on up and down the line.

The Version Given. I asked a highly educated soldier belonging to one of the regiments which are said to have distinguished themselves by bad "morale" under fire, what was in the story. He replied: "We are blamed for what has happened in every war since wars began, we ran but we only did what the best soldiers in the world have done, and would have done again under similar circumstances. The war broke out suddenly. Almost without a warning we were hustled out of offices, from behind counters, from desks and studies into uniforms and rushed into trains. Our trains went directly upon the battlefield and we were detained actually under heavy fire. We did not have time to assemble, to get our bearings, anything. We got off the train to be shot down. Somebody ran. Somebody else followed. Two more followed the first and the others seeing some running away, followed suit. It is a psychological fact that this is what happens always under these circumstances. "We should have been halted a mile to the rear, assembled and marched in orderly fashion, into the firing line. In that way we would have had time to look around, to see where we were, to catch courage one from another. Wake the boldest man from heavy sleep, in the dead of night, and let him have a great danger to face. He will be afraid providing he is not too stupid to have any sensations at all. Wake him up and give him a few minutes time to get himself together, then let him face the danger and he will meet it as a brave man should."

It is Not True. The story that soldiers from the South of France lack courage is no doubt a slander. General Joffre comes from Rivesaltes, in the Pyrenees; General Gallieni from Saint-

Another Attempt Will Be Made to Recover Fabulous Sum Believed to be in Brother Jonathan. CRESCENT CITY, Sept. 4.—Crescent City is being thrilled with stories of the plans of treasure hunters who are said to be fitting out an expedition in the hope of recovering a half million dollars in gold lost when the steamer Brother Jonathan sank off Point St. George almost a half century ago. How the band of treasure hunters hope to locate the wreck, who are their backers and what their plans are are matters which are closely guarded. It is said they plan to send out a salvage ship with divers and other equipment necessary in wrecking work, but the leading spirits in the enterprise remain a secret. The spot where the Brother Jonathan struck, or at least the location generally pointed to as her grave, is in an exposed position. The sea foams over the reef, and save in August and September there are few calm days. In July, 1865, the Brother Jonathan, with treasure valued at $500,000, hit a reef and sank in a few minutes. Only 19 of her 250 passengers were saved.

Beat, also in these mountains; General Foch from the village of Valentigney, likewise of the mountains between France and Swain; while General Castelnau calls Garidoch his home, this little town being on the plains about Toulouse. These soldiers have already won places in history by their iron courage; they are the men in whose hands the fate of France rests; they are the commanders in chief of all the French and thus far the whole world agrees they have accomplished wonders. Yes, they are from the Midi. The southern Frenchman does not lack courage, nor does he lack patriotism. He is different, yes, from his northern French brother, but he is all there just the same. He talks differently, eats differently, thinks differently, dresses differently, lives differently, so why should he not fight differently and—in this great war—die differently.

ARSON GANGS BUSY

FIREBUGS BURN HOMES AND HAYSTACKS IN CALIFORNIA. Vigilantes Reorganized Near Chino to Combat New Foe—Motive Cannot be Ascertained.

CHINO, Calif., Sept. 4.—Vigilantes, a feature of California life in the "old days" made their appearance here literally over night when a gang of firebugs tried to destroy the city recently. Several haystacks simultaneously burst into flames. Then houses on opposite sides of town began burning. When men hastened to fight one blaze another, far away, reddened the sky. Got Their Guns. The vigilantes appeared. There was no call for them, no organization, but in a few minutes an orderly crowd was gathered in the middle of town, well armed. A search was begun. Sentries were posted. One of them caught the arsonists sneaking up to a haystack, and opened fire with a rifle. The gangsters fled. Shortly other vigilantes took up the trail, and pursued the fugitives in an automobile. When bullets began flying the gasoline in the vigilantes' machine became exhausted, and the firebugs escaped in a fast motor. But the scare was ended. The vigilantes quietly patrolled the city. They lurked, silent shadows, in many a dark corner. Every person on the streets was sharply challenged and forced to explain himself. Cannot Understand It. The arson squad's handwork was very apparent all through town, however, in blackened fields, heaps of debris and tangles of charred beams that had once been homes. Authorities are at a loss to find a motive for the terrorist campaign. The firebugs vanished as quickly as they appeared. Had it not been for the armed volunteers, the whole town of Chino would have been laid waste, in the opinion of many residents.
