GERMAN AMBASSADOR AT TURKEY IS DEAD

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 25.—Baron Von Wangenheim, German Ambassador to Turkey, died today.

TELLS OF ALASKA

BEN DAVIS, IN JACK LONDON'S "BURNING DAYLIGHT" HERE

Knew London, Rex Beach, Joaquin Miller, Robert W. Service in the North—Here on Business

"B. L. Davis, Seattle." When the name appeared on the Chandler register the name looked the same as dozens of others that come there through the week. And then a man from Alaska got to ruminating through his mind and all at once it occurred to him. "B. L. Davis—why not?" By Gosh its Ben Davis in Jack London's "Burning Daylight," the only fellow who ever threw the strong man of the North.

Thereupon ye scribe questioned this man B. L. Davis, tapped him as it were, and found there a veritable wealth of information on the North, the Klondike in the days of the gold rush of '97 and '98 and a man who has brushed elbows with the greatest writers of northern adventure stories. It was the same man. He's a modest individual, but he does love to tell a story—and how he can tell them. A man of medium height, a trifle gray but as vigorous as you please. In breathless haste he was asked dozens of questions almost at once and he tried to answer them all.

Found Out Again "You've got me again," he laughed good naturedly. "Yes, I'm the same Ben Davis. Jack London in "Burning Daylight" didn't take the trouble to change the names of original characters. He came up North there, took a look at us and put the whole shebang in. Just as he found them. And say, Jack London, Rex Beach and those fellows, they weren't exaggerating. They painted things as they actually found them."

Joaquin Miller on Trail On the trail Mr. Davis met Joaquin Miller, when the aged poet of the Sierras, tramped through the frozen North and was almost frozen to death. He knew Rex Beach in Dawson and in Nome. He knew Jack London and Robert W. Chambers, author of the Tales of a Sourdough, was on Whitehorse, when Mr. Davis was in the north.

It was in '97 that Ben Davis, unable to resist the temptation of the gold seekers' put out from Seattle to seek his fortune. This was in June and in Nome a party of which he became a member paid $12,000 for a funny little old steamboat and started for Dawson. Up the Yukon River they chugged, along with dozens of other gold maddened outfits.

On the start the owners of the boat elected J. C. Barrett skipper. Later he became a multi-millionaire in the Tanana district and then came to Seattle and entered the banking business.

As they chugged, they often stopped along shore to cut their wood. But Circle City was the farthest they got before the ice closed in, a month earlier than ever before.

Ben Davis laughs now over the trip and tells how they chafed through the long winter days until in desperation he paid $300 for a "measlesy Malenau dog" that he bought from an Indian and started, in the harness with the dog, across the ice to Dawson, 300 miles away.

"And all the ice I'd ever seen before this was in an ice wagon," laughed Mr. Davis. "For 30 nights I slept on the ice and you bet I reached Dawson too, but it pretty near killed me and the dog doing it."

Captain Follows "Hunch" On the trip to Circle City he said Captain Barrett had a "hunch" that there would be things doing in the Tanana district. The party talked him out of it for the time, but later he went in there and found the richest strike of the Klondike from one claim over a million dollars from one claim.

And the characters of the "Silver Hoard," "Burning Daylight," "Smoke Believ," and all those well read novels of northern life, Ben Davis knew them all and called them by name. "Cherry Malotte, in 'The Spoilers' was an actual person. I knew her, so did everyone in Dawson, and she was white, too, and mighty well liked in the camp."

War Spells Business For a long time Ben Davis ran a large store in Dawson. Then he came down to Stewart. That place boomed and people thought the railroad was coming. There he ran a large hotel, selling out later and, until the war started, was interested in Vancouver, B. C., with Alven Scherer one of the wealthiest and most prominent Germans of Canada, who now lives in Seattle, barred from crossing the border. "And of course, though I am an American citizen, being associated with a German, I had to get out too, and so here I am."

Lure of Gold Prevails "He says that he is looking Coos Bay over, but will say nothing more beyond this and says he expects to leave very shortly for San Francisco on business. But the spirit of the North grows on one and ever calls them back. And so with Ben Davis, he too is going back.

"Say," he declared, "do you know they've made another big strike up

REPORT SERBIA IN BAD SHAPE

It is Admitted in London That Her Position is Becoming Increasingly Grave

But Teutonic Forces and Those of Bulgaria Are Only Thirty-five Miles Apart

FIGHTING HARD IN EAST

Rice Battle On For Possession of Riga but Russians Claim Germans Have Not Made Any Advance—French Claim Gains

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Various unverified reports of Serbian successes are received from Balkan points today but London says Serbia's position is increasingly grave. To the north, the Bulgarians and Austro-Germans are within 35 miles of joining hands. To the south, half of Serbian Macedonia is in possession of the Bulgarians. It is reported the capture of Isakup is correct.

Serbian Claims This would mean invaders have in their hands nearly all means of communication. A dispatch from Gradec, Serbia, dated Saturday, claims however, that the French troops are working up the railroad line from Saloniki, and beating off the Bulgarian forces.

Another dispatch says the Bulgarians were defeated on the Gradec-Volvandovo-Rabrovo front.

In the west, Paris announces capture by the French of the important salient north of Messul Les Hurlus, taking several trenches.

In the east, Berlin reports heavy fighting still in progress for possession of Riga. An official report indicates no further progress for the Germans. On one part of the Riga front, the Russians are now on the offensive.

DENY THE STORIES

GERMANY SAYS DETAILS OF EXECUTION ARE INVENTION

Claims They Were Told to Counteract Indignation at Germans Being Shot Down

BERLIN, Oct. 25. (Wireless to Sayville)—Germany's enemies apparently are anxious to counteract the indignation aroused by the fact that German sailors on a sinking submarine, who had surrendered and held up their hands, were shot down one after another, says an Overseas News agency.

Claim Stories Invented For this purpose they are giving the widest publication to invented stories about sentences by court martial against conspirators in Brussels. The fact is the conspirators knew what they were doing and what they might expect under the law. Countless soldiers were helped to join the armies now fighting against Germany.

Sad Necessity The statement says that all stories about the details of one of these executions in Brussels is pure invention. Execution was a sad necessity, but was carried out according to the law, without incident.

there. You bet, bigger than they ever had before—that is it looks that way. Over near Tollivana in the Tanana district. Stuff running $1.50 to the square foot of bedrock. Can you beat it?"

LAST MONTH MOST BLOODY OF THE WAR

A Berlin report says October has been the bloodiest month of the war. In 30 days the loss in killed and wounded exceeded the terrifying figure of 1,000,000. There have been weeks of slaughter on every front, and many of the rivers of Europe are carrying crimson tides to the sea. The battle lines extend over a front 2,000 miles long.

POKE'S CHIEF'S EYE

R. S. BATTLES BATTLES WHEN ARRESTED IN WOMAN'S ROOM

Entered in Drunken Condition and Chief Makes Hurry Up Trip—To Meditate in Jail

R. S. Battles was arrested about 2:30 Sunday morning at a residence near the corner of Fourth and Highland in the room of a young woman into whose presence it is alleged by Chief Carter he had forced himself in a drunken condition. The woman immediately ran to a telephone and summoned Police Chief Carter. On the appearance of the latter, Battles swung his fist and caught Carter on the side of the eye, leaving a mark, and the latter silenced all objections by the use of the night stick. Battles was sentenced to pay a $25 fine this morning and failing in this, went to jail for 12 1/2 days.

Woman Did Not Appear The charge entered against him was that of being drunk and resisting an officer. The young woman did not appear in court. Battles pleaded guilty as charged and Hugh Barclay, appearing as his attorney, argued that Battles knew the woman and "following the ways of a drunken man, naturally went seeking his friends when he got drunk."

He pleaded that the accused came of a good family, has been trailed by a streak of hard luck that finally brought him down to a two or three-days' drunk, and should be given another chance. He was given a chance to raise the $25 fine.

Had Demanded Entrance Chief Carter said that Battle had gone to the room of the young woman, who is a domestic, and had demanded entrance, forcing himself into the room. The woman was forced to run out onto the porch and around to the hallway to a telephone where she called Carter to come at once.

He arrived there to find Battles had locked the door and taken possession of the woman's room.

Fists in Evidence Entrance was demanded, the door was opened and Battles, so Chief Carter states, declared he would go with him, but as the latter turned to open the door again Battle "took him a pass in the eye." And the aforesaid optic, together with the bruises, was exhibited to the judge.

"And then outside he showed fight again," said the Chief, "and I gave him a bit of the stick." Battle put up not more battles, but followed peacefully along to jail. He has been here for several months and has been interested in the fixing and the sale of pianos.

No Names Mentioned The name of the young woman was not mentioned in the trial of this morning, neither did she appear in court. Chief Carter said that he does not even know her name. She resides at the old D. L. Rood house and that is all the information that was given out.
