ELKS DANCE

Marshfield lodge of Elks are making preparations for another of their very pleasant dancing parties at the lodge room in Masonic hall on Wednesday evening. Frank V. Catterlin chairman of the committee on arrangements announces that the committee has planned a big surprise for the party and it promises to be one of the most largely attended and elaborate of the season.

"500" PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Keating entertained a number of friends informally last Saturday evening at "500". Decorations were carried out successfully in the Hallowe'en idea and a most delightful evening was enjoyed. Miss Volz won lady's first prize, and Tom Harvey the Gentleman's. At a late hour, the hostess assisted by Mrs. Chas. Fensler and daughter Maxine, served a dainty luncheon.

HIGH SCHOOL PARTY

Under the direction of Miss Ethel Reese, senior advisor, the Senior class of the Marshfield High School gave a delightful Hallowe'en masquerade last Saturday evening in the High School. The decorations were in charge of the Juniors, the Sophs prepared the eats, and it fell to the lot of the Freshies to perform the "clean up" stunt, which they did well and cheerfully. All of the appointments of the evening were carried out in real Hallowe'en style, and a big share of the credit is given to Miss Reese who labored so hard for the success of the affair. The gymnasium was the scene of activity during the fore part of the evening. Here the games were played, including fortune telling and then every one took part in the grand march in costume. After this, an entertainment prepared by the Senior class was given in the auditorium of the High School, the numbers being both clever and entertaining. The first stunt presented a band of trained seals, under the direction of Miss Eva Hansen. Those taking part were Misses Marjorie Drews, Evelyn Mirasoul, Bess Flanagan, and Clara Ferguson. They were dressed as seals.

The next act was quite an original one. It was a "take off" of the High School teachers, and called forth shouts of laughter. Each member of the faculty was imitated by some member of the Senior class. Those imitated and the imitators were:

Prof. R. E. Waite . . . Elmer Johnson
Supt. F. A. Tiedgen . . . Ralph Dresser
Prof. A. J. M. Robertson . . . Carl Back
L. J. Leland . . . Ray Davis
F. L. Grannis . . . Allan McDuffee
Miss Stebno . . . Alice Mathison
Miss Reese . . . Nellie Warwick
Miss Hogue . . . Roxie Hall
Miss Stokes . . . Marie Vasey
Miss Volz . . . Ethel Josephson
Mr. Baragar . . . Ed. Bolt

A clever little act was then given under the instruction of Mr. Leland, assisted by Ed. Bolt. It was a series of wax figures, so called wax, but in reality a number of seniors in disguise.

The actors and their parts were:

The Chinese Giantess . . . Eva Hansen
The Vocalist . . . Allan McDuffee
The Dwarf . . . Miss McKeown
The Two Faced Girl . . . Ruth Dungan and Della Oldland.

The last act was a number of cartoons of the High School pupils which were thrown on the screen. Some of these were extremely amusing.

Refreshments were served in Hallowe'en style and were a fitting windup of a delightful party.

CHILDREN'S PARTIES

Mary and Alice McKinnon were hostesses last Saturday evening at a Hallowe'en party for a number of little friends, the games, decorations and refreshments all being symbolic of the Hallowe'en season. Lucile Douglas won the prize for planning the handle on the pumpkin.

The children present were: Luella Douglas, Mary Eleanor Mills, Kathryn Toye, Luella and Jane McLain, Ruth Going, Stella Magnus and the boys, Junior Ballinger, Jimmie Mills, Jimmie Lyons, Eugene Crosthwaite and Steen Magnus.

THE PRIZE MASQUERADE DANCE

LIBRARY DANCE

A Hallowe'en dance was given Saturday night by the members of the North Bend library board for the benefit of the library. It was a very enjoyable affair but on account of so many other private parties on the same night the attendance was not as large as had been hoped for and only just about paid expenses, so there was no profit. However those who were there had a pleasant evening. The ladies in charge of the affair were Mrs. C. F. McCollum, Mrs. Herbert Armstrong, Mrs. L. C. Reynolds and Mrs. George Hazer. The Eckhoff hall where the dance took place was elaborately decorated in an appropriate way. The colors were yellow and black and clusters of autumn leaves were used.

MUCH WORK DONE

Activity in Curry County mining is reported by the Western World, of Bandon, which says:

"F. Kernold, blacksmith, and Jack McGill, were up from the Sixes River mines the latter part of the week after supplies. They report that over a mile and a quarter of the big-four-mile flume is now built and that considerable of the right of way of the remaining distance is being cleared by the advance crews. Of this section about 1 1/2 miles is nearing completion.

"The Sixes River Mining Company, of which A. H. Thomas is manager, is apparently an active and substantial concern. It has completed building a sawmill for making the lumber used in building the big flume and for putting up the necessary buildings. This mill is now running full capacity.

"Many Bandon men are working at the mines and the company is said to be employing a large crew."

TITLES INVOLVED

MERCHANT HEIRS START SUITS TO RECLAIM PROPERTY

Claim to 53 Lots Bordering Mill Slough Made, Also to 21 Acres at Mouth of Coos River

Two suits involving the title to lands now claimed by the C. A. Smith Company, and the Marshfield Realty and Trading Company were started with hearings today before A. B. Loud, court reporter, in the offices of Stoll & Hodge. Briefs will be submitted to Judge Skipworth, of Eugene, when he comes to the Circuit Court bench in Coos County this December.

The case of the heirs of Charles H. Merchant versus the Marshfield Realty and Trading Company involves the title to some 53 vacant lots bordering old Mill Slough between Broadway and Seventh streets.

The contention set up by the plaintiffs is that many years ago the state decided these former tide lands to E. B. Dean, David Wilcox and Charles H. Merchant and that the latter never deeded away his share of the lands. On the other hand the defendants are claiming that Merchant did deed away his share and that the land is also theirs by adverse possession.

Another Land Suit.

The second suit is that of the Merchant heirs versus the Smith-Powers Logging Company and involves title to 21 acres of land at the lower end of Merchants Island at the mouth of Coos River.

It is the contention of the plaintiffs that some 25 years ago Charles H. Merchant, deceased, bought the property from the state and that he has never parted with title.

HALLOWE'EN QUIET

GOBLINS REPORTED IN PEACEFUL MOOD

Police Receive No Calls For Assistance—Hildebrands "One Hoss Shay" On Bank Steps

Goblins of Hallowe'en were quiet and "ladylike" in their ghost flitting of Saturday night. The police report no calls were made for their assistance and, so far as they can find out, nothing was done that should not be.

On Sunday morning J. W. Hildebrand's wonderful "one hoss shay" was found on the front door steps of the Flanagan and Bennett bank and an auto tire was fastened to the door.

Large plate glass windows of business houses on the main streets were covered with soap signs, the tricks of little school children, but to all intents and purposes it was a quiet Hallowe'en.

There was a group of boys that flung a few clods at the high school gymnasium while a party was in session, but the miscreants soon scattered when they saw a policeman coming.

TELLS OF RAISING

COUNTLESS CHECKS

A most interesting gentleman is R. E. Oliver, who has been in our midst for a few days, engaged in demonstrating the gentle art of forgery up to date.

The newspaper men watched Mr. Oliver at work the other day and found it exceedingly interesting to see him change the amount on nearly every check that was placed before him. With a few pen strokes "Two Dollars" became "Five Hundred" right in front of your eyes. A carefully written "Sixteen" magically changed to "Seventy-six." "Eight Dollars" was transferred to "Eighty Dollars" in a twinkling, and with only one sweep of the pen.

When a more pretentious piece of work is required, he adopts the old forger trick of using acids with which everything that has been written on the check may be removed—except the signature—and the amount, date, name of payee, etc., rewritten to suit the forger.

A recent case reported in the newspapers was that of a 13-year-old girl in Marysville, Cal., who confessed that she had robbed her guardian of hundreds of dollars by raising checks bearing the guardian's signature. One of these checks originally signed for only $5 is in the hands of the authorities. It was changed to $80 and accepted by the bank without detection.

In the course of his travels Mr. Oliver has made a hobby of collecting forgeries. He has a collection of clippings almost as large as a bale of hay, all of them relating to famous cases of forgery that have engaged the attention of Pinkerton men and bank officials throughout the country. Some of his reproductions of raised checks are most interesting examples of the forger's handiwork. For instance, there is a draft that was raised by a professional band in San Francisco from $12 to $22,000.

In fact, according to Mr. Oliver,

MAKE RECORD TRIP

FISHERMAN COME FROM ALLEGANY IN 13 HOURS

Tell Wonderful Tales of Why They Stayed Out All Night—Matches No Use in Dense Fog

Its a long road to Tipperary—we know that—but a trip of 13 hours from Allegany to Marshfield has surely "hung" something over on the good old war ballad. R. Bugge and W. A. Ackerman are explaining how its done, only they say, never again, at least in a motor boat anyway.

The whole thing is a long story. It begins with fishing, that is, they went up the river Thursday morning, with E. G. Opperman in Lew Thomas' "autogo" for the purpose of fishing.

They were happy and all day long plashed about in the waters close to Allegany and, they say, caught some 20 or 30 salmon trout with a rainbow over and anon.

Weird tales they tell of how they herded the salmon upstream through the riffles and watched them play on the bank. It was 4:30 p. m. when the good ship turned downstream toward Marshfield. At the end of the first mile something blew out of somewhere and the auto autogo stopped dead still.

Opperman is an engineer, an electrical engineer to be exact, and way into the darkness he tinkered amidst grease and grime and finally at 8:30 the engine came to life, panted sputtered and chugged off down the river with Ackerman at the wheel.

On she came—oh, good old boat—she cleared the forks and turned her prow due west homeward to hearth and fireside. The fog settled down so thick the helmsman couldn't see his watch.

"Oh, a life on the ocean wave," sang the quartermaster out of pure joy as he thought of a big juicy steak and the "two on a raft" for supper. He was interrupted by a sharp command to "sheer off" but the launch ran sheer on and tried to climb over the dike at the river's edge.

There was more backing in the fog and the vessel moved again and half an hour later the party found themselves in the wrong channel and were forced to turn back. Along the piling they groped, from one post to another and it was exactly 5:15 a. m. when the Standard Oil dock loomed in the offing and 15 minutes later the fishermen had completed a 13 hour trip from Allegany and established a record.

LIKE PINE STREET

SIMILAR CASE AT INDEPENDENCE

Rules That Sidewalks and Fence Lines Govern—City's Long Acceptance Approval

The following dispatch from Dallas, Oregon, will be of interest here as the questions involved practically are same as in the Pine street case in Marshfield:

"Circuit Judge Belt stopped the City of Independence from changing contested street lines in accordance with a survey made by County Surveyor Canfield, which would force adjoining property owners to move back several feet from the present lines. The court held that the city's long acceptance of the lines has enjoined it from making the change. The action was taken on a suit for injunction by J. Hart, of Independence, against the city.

"The contested street was formerly a county road leading from the bridge at Independence, through North Independence and joining with the Salem road. The proposed change in the lines was bitterly threshed out in the Council before the case was taken to the courts.

"Evidence was brought out at the trial that the street had been established for many years, that the lines had been accepted and that property owners had built fences and buildings on the basis of the present lines. The cases lasted two days, and many witnesses were called. Judge Belt inspected the street before he decided the case.

"Several Independence Councilmen have declared that the case will be taken on appeal to the Supreme Court."

AMONG THE SICK

Mrs. F. W. Bettram has been quite sick at her home in West Marshfield.

Mrs. Frankie Lattin of South Marshfield was taken to Mercy hospital last night to undergo an operation.

You can never tell, when you sign a check, whether all the people who will handle it are honest or not. So the only way to be safe is to use the Todd Protograph System, the only sure method of check detection. All other methods have been beaten and Mr. Oliver offers to prove it.

BANKERS ARGUE AGAINST A MARSHFIELD CONVENTION

Term This "Out of the Way Place" Despite Fact Railroad Will Be Here Before Convention Date

Holding of the Oregon State Bankers' Convention in Marshfield next year is meeting a deal of opposition, according to reports in the last issue of the Pacific Banker, published in Portland. Marshfield is termed an "out of the way place" and the fear is expressed that should the meeting be held on Coos Bay "the attendance will be small and the harm to the association will be serious." Letters from the local Chamber of Commerce to every member of the executive committee of the bankers' association are being sent out in an effort to convince them these arguments are wrong.

Want It In Portland
The article says that "some Portland bankers are questioning the advisability of holding the next annual convention at Marshfield. The point is made that, for the highest good of the association, the meeting of next June should be held in Portland or some point of equal accessibility. If this is not done, it is urged there is danger that it will be unfortunate for the state association as an organization.

Objects to Distance
E. G. Crawford, vice-president of the Lumbermen's National Band, Portland, says: "It is not so convenient for the banker east of the mountains to get to Marshfield. The time in going and coming will take too long. The membership of the state association and interest in its discussions will fall off sadly if we repeat the performance of last June, when the meeting was held way down in San Francisco, and have but 20 or 30 people at two conventions in succession, a result which likely to follow if we go to Marshfield."

Many Want to Come Here.
R. Bugge, of the Scandinavian-American Bank, who points out this article in the Pacific Banker, says that while in Portland some time ago he saw many of the bankers individually and that they expressed themselves willing and ready to come to Marshfield, stating their eagerness to see the new railroad, which will be open then, and the development that is being made here.

TO RUSH THE WORK

WESTERN UNION WILL CONSTRUCT FROM BOTH ENDS

Start Line from Siuslaw South Well As Working From Coos Bay North

In addition to the construction work of the Western Union telegraph line along the coast from Eay north there will also be a construction gang working from north end south. The Eugene Register says:

"J. W. Buys, construction superintendent of the Western Union telegraph company, with a crew of left Eugene for the coast to erect a camp and resume construction of the telegraph line along the coast way toward Marshfield. A line will be established two miles west of Cushman, the present terminus of the telegraph line.

Poles for the extension of the line are already at the camp site strung along the railroad right-of-way. As soon as this crew is established in camp the men will begin the work of setting the poles after a few miles of them are in position the wires will be strung. This will be done as early as possible so that the construction may be directed by means of the telegraph and telephone.
