Remains of Mrs. Caldwell Will Go Overland to Salem Tomorrow—Will Cremate One

All but one of the six bodies of the Santa Clara wreck victims which were at the Dungan undertaking parlors have been buried or taken away. The body of Mrs. Caldwell is still here and will be taken by way of Florence probably tomorrow morning to Salem for burial.

Saturday the body of Mrs. Dunn was taken to Butte, Mont., and the body of Mrs. Cullen to Portland, both by the overland route.

Will Be Cremated
The body of Mrs. D. H. Thorne was taken on the F. A. Kilburn Sunday to San Francisco, accompanied by her husband who was a survivor. The body will be cremated.

An incident in connection with Mr. and Mrs. Thorne is told in a press dispatch from Hood River which says:

When Mr. and Mrs. David Thorne were leaving Hood River to catch the steamer Santa Clara, in the wreck of which last night the latter lost her life, they were on the verge of postponing their sailing because of failure of Mr. Thorne to receive a suit of clothes ordered by a local merchant. An effort had been made to fit Mr. Thorne, who is a large man, from the local stock. Failing in this the merchant had the suit made to order. If the clothes had been a day later the couple would not have left Hood River and would not have caught the ill-fated Santa Clara.

Mrs. Thorne, who has been prominent in county grange circles, since her residence here, was formerly a saleswoman for Woodard, Clarke & Co., in Portland.

OREGON COLLEGE HEN MAKES GREAT RECORD

CORVALLIS, Nov. 6.—With a record of 301 eggs in 365 days, another hen, produced by selective breeding at the Oregon Agricultural College, has succeeded in reaching the coveted position of a 300-egg producer—the second whose official record has been announced to the world. A few years ago it was considered impossible that a hen should produce 300 eggs a year, since the average hen in the United States produces about 72 eggs annually.

Astonished World
About two years ago one of the college pen of selected layers astonished the world by producing 303 eggs in a year. Just before that another of the same breeding had made a record of 291 eggs and this hen is a grandmother of the new record hen at the college, known as E-115. The mother of the new 300-egg hen had also made a world's record by producing 334 eggs in four consecutive years, an average of 217 per year for the four years. Another member of the same family has made a record of 286 eggs. Two other hens are well above 200 and are in excellent position to equal or surpass the earlier record of 303 eggs.

"The noteworthy feature of these records is that they are the result of selective breeding for eggs and eggs alone, carried on at the Oregon station for a number of years," said Professor Dryden in announcing the new records. "Hen E-115 is one of the flock of 60 of similar breeding that will finish the year with an average of more than 220 eggs."

"This new variety has been developed by crossing different breeds and has been given the name of Oregon."

TESTIMONY TAKEN FROM CREW OF SANTA CLARA

Statement Made That Steering Gear Engines Not Strong Enough Under Certain Conditions

That the engines which operated the steam steering gear of the wrecked steamer Santa Clara were not of sufficient strength to turn the rudder under some conditions, was the substance of some of the evidence which was gathered at the investigation held by Coroner Wilson and District Attorney Lilleqvist. An inquest has not been held but it was decided to secure the testimony of the men on the vessel while they were all here.

Will All Be Fined
This testimony was taken Saturday afternoon and has been transcribed and signed and sworn to and will be placed on record with the county clerk for the use of the next grand jury if that body wishes to investigate the matter. It makes an official record of the wreck.

Not Strong Enough
Twelve or fifteen of the officers and men were examined. The testimony was not given out in detail but it is understood that one of the features brought out was that before the vessel went into any of the harbors the rudder was tested to see if it would work. It was operated by two engines. At least one of the witnesses testified that these two little engines were not of sufficient strength to move the rudder when the vessel was in very heavy waters and under certain circumstances.

All Details Were Asked
Just what effect this evidence may have is a matter to be decided in the future but at any rate that statement was made in the evidence taken. All details were asked the members of the crew and it is said that they answered freely all that was asked. The evidence is now recorded and will be for the use of the grand jury or any official body that cares to look into the disaster.

GEOGRAPHY BAD

Pictures Mislead Regarding Wreck of Santa Clara

Two Portland papers, to further illustrate their stories of the Santa Clara wreck, have drawn pictures to show the people exactly where the accident happened. Both of them have made out the wreck is inside the harbor, somewhere near the mouth of South Inlet.

Both illustrations of Coos Bay and this section of the coast have been entirely wrong and such as to give the impression that the bar was entirely to blame for the wrecking.

As a matter of fact the location of the Santa Clara at the present moment is on the beach of the open sea, within a slight curve of the coast and at least two miles from the bar. The accident happened after the vessel had gone through the worst part of the bar and was in comparative safety had the steering gear not gone wrong.

MISSING FROM SANTA CLARA ARE ACCOUNTED FOR

Fred Jones is a Wedderburn Man and Was Seen Here Since The Disaster

According to the list of those on board the Santa Clara received here, the last of the missing passengers has been located. Saturday the only one not accounted for was Fred Jones.

The North Pacific Steamship Co. has been trying to account for all those who were missing and the Santa Clara Times has taken a good deal of trouble to find some of the missing people and has succeeded in locating a number.

On the suggestion of the Portland Journal wired Saturday night that Jones might be a Wedderburn man, an investigation was made and it was learned that the missing Fred Jones was the brother of Phil Jones of Curry County, and resides at Wedderburn. He takes a pleasure trip every year and was returning from his annual vacation.

William Hunter, who was a passenger on the vessel, knows Jones and saw him on the boat and states that he is positive that he saw him alive since the wreck and is of the opinion that Mr. Jones continued on to his home.

This leaves the death list at 12 with the bodies of four of the crew missing.

BODY TAKEN HOME

The body of Mrs. M. J. Dunn, who was drowned in the Santa Clara wreck, has been taken back to Butte, Mont., for burial. Accompanying was the son and daughter, Roy and Margaret. A sister of Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Dan McDonald, of North Bend, also went back to Butte with the family.
