A PITIFUL LINE OF WORK

PORTLAND mother is in jail for shop-lifting and has taken a 100 day jail sentence rather than divulge her address. She has two children and as she is in poor circumstances there is a chance that her little ones may be in want. It is a pathetic case and there will be sympathy for her plight, yet if this woman had applied to honest work the same time and ability she devoted to theft she could have avoided want for herself and children and any possibility of disgrace. Thievery is an extremely poor line of work—even when the moral side is over looked. The remuneration is generally pitifully small and the risks are terrible. People should not steal unless they are sure they can afford the price they sooner or later must pay. And no one can.

WITH THE TOAST AND THE TEA

GOOD EVENING

Energy will do anything that can be done in this world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities will make a two-legged animal a man without it.—Goethe.

TO GENIUS RECOGNIZED—AFTER DEATH

Yes, laud him, all ye scoffers, And smirk in self content. While he lived, 'twas not with laurels

His aged back was bent. When I think of his threadbare garments,

His eyes with the hope burned out— With even a look of hunger, Do you wonder that I doubt?

You have reared a noble monument, You have carved a marble bust; What cheer to a dead ambition! What food to a heart of dust!

While he lived, he walked in solitude,

Dead, the multitude speaks his name, He died a starving beggar, And this, my friends, is fame.

How he worked to win your fickle praise,

"He has won!" I can hear you shout It may be well, yet still I see His eyes with the hope burned out.—Selected.

Before he gets her he tells her how "dear" she is to him. And after he gets her he often tells her how "dear" she is to him, but the "dear" has an entirely different meaning.

The only hats in the millinery store that would make a Coos Bay woman look ten years younger are the ones she can't afford to buy.

QUESTION FOR THE DAY

What has become of the old-fashioned girl who used to get a silver thimble for a birthday present?

A Coos Bay woman can't see why a man would rather throw things at a waste basket than throw things in it.

A man can learn a whole lot of things by going to college, but he never seems to learn that when he hasn't anything to say he should not try to say it.

BETCHA! It surely would be pleasant, It surely would be nice, If we all gave assistance As freely as advice.

Some Coos Bay men are not half as much worried about their daily bread as they are about their daily gasoline.

Anyway the average Coos Bay man would rather play poker with a bad loser than play with a good winner.

OH! The lawyer's gruffness found no pause;

It caused me consternation, But he was cross because it was A cross examination.

THE OPTIMIST The optimist goes through this life with a song.

His good cheer he never lets dim, For he doesn't care much what happens as long As it doesn't happen to him.

When he is courting her he is always telling her how unworthy of her he is. And then he marries her and proves it.

Advice is Given Farmers on Their Selection of Seed Corn

Corn is a crop which is receiving much attention in Coos county right now as many of the farmers are meeting with success in growing it. The Oregon Agricultural College has published an instructive article on the subject of selecting seed corn which says:

Surveys have shown that the yield of corn in one county of a corn state would have been increased by the sum of $21 an acre throughout the county, other things being equal, if correct selection of the seed had been made. Since "other things were to have been equal" it is plain that the cost would have remained the same, so that the $21 would have represented a net profit, minus only the addition cost of selection. It is safe to say that at least $20 an acre would have been cleared by proper seed selection, displaying a profit of $2,000 for each of the 100 farmers whose 100-acre crop was surveyed. Additional harvest cost would have been something, but that is an item that growers delight to pay.

Not a Corn State

Since Oregon is not, with a very few exceptions, a natural corn state, and since by proper methods profitable corn crops can be grown, especially for hogging off, silage and a few other purposes it is especially necessary to take advantage of all feasible means to increase the yield and lower the production cost. Good seed and acclimated seed are among the most important of these means and are entitled to a leading place in the program of corn production. Good seed can be secured by purchase, if one is willing and able to pay the price, but seed acclimated to Oregon conditions, especially the Willamette Valley, cannot be purchased at any price except as it was grown in the locality for which the seed is intended.

It is thus apparent that the necessity for proper selection of seed corn is of even more importance to Oregon growers than to those in states where the industry is well established.

Methods of selecting, harvesting and storing the seed corn, are explained by J. E. Larson, Extension Agronomist of the Agricultural College, as follows:

How To Do It

On seed corn day a sack should be taken by a strap across the shoulder and the seed corn selections made. Be sure that the strap fitting across the shoulder is broad enough to avoid irritation, or it may have a tendency to cut the work short. In passing through the field one or two rows may be watched. Select ears of medium size, with husks indicating the stage of maturity well along, the ear hanging at a proper angle to avoid water running in and a shank not too large, but indicative of strength and vigor. At both ends of the field sacks or boxes should be placed to empty the corn into. When the husks are removed, ready for storing, part of the ears will necessarily have to be discarded and the final selections made just before planting time, when the corn is tested.

Must Be Cared For

The care of the corn after selection has much to do with its grow-

W. G. CHANDLER WITNESSED U. OF W. AND U. OF C. BATTLE Says Transition From Rugby Too Sudden—Berkeley Men Ignorant of American Game

Big and brawny huskies of the University of California eleven last Saturday utterly ignorant of even the first principles of the American game fell before the onslaughts of men no larger than they but trained like a machine by Gilmour Dobie, said W. G. Chandler who was a spectator at the game. The U. of C. and the U. of W. are meeting again today in Seattle.

The change from Rugby to the American game in a few weeks was too sudden a transition to develop a good team. He said that Jimmie Schaeffer, the coach who for nine years trained the Rugby eleven at Berkeley, also tried to make a quick change. He went east this summer for a month's short course in the new game.

In that length of time, though, he was unable to master the technique that Gilmour Dobie has been cultivating for the past 12 years. He resigned immediately after the game of last Saturday, another coach was secured and it remains to be seen by the score that comes tonight whether or not, in one week's time, much of a change could be wrought.

F. A. KILBURN SAILS FOG FINDS THIEF

STEAMSHIP DELAYED THIS MORNING BY FOG MAN STEALS SUIT FROM COOK ON KILBURN—BOAT DELAYED

Leaves For Portland This Afternoon With Heavy Passenger List —Much Return Freight

Because of the heavy fog that prevailed this morning, the steamship Kilburn was unable to get away at 5:30 a. m., and waited until 1 p. m., before leaving for Portland. She carried a good passenger list and freight cargo. The Kilburn will return on the 15th.

The passengers north from here were: Leonard Oldland, Mrs. Oldland, Oscar Nicholson, L. L. Alexander, C. F. Greves, Clarence Hawkinsberg, V. Henderson, C. Closest, Mrs. A. Rice, O. J. Simpkins, Petty Morris, V. Walters, C. Lingo, C. Maritch, B. Baker, A. C. Jellison, E. Braggle, F. Wheeler, H. Hansen, A. B. Johnson, A. C. Pickley, E. J. Peterson, Henry Junita, C. K. Smith, John Downs, H. Kostl, Mrs. Kostl, Mrs. W. T. Rogers, Mrs. Salkirk, Miss Abter, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. L. G. Wright, Anita Jamison, Eleanor Oldland, Mabel May, W. A. Burk, Mrs. Burk and Mrs. C. T. Travis and 20 passengers steerage.

Edward Wright thought it would sail early and brought ashore stolen Garb—in Jail. To the heavy fog that hung over Coos Bay and the bar this morning may be attributed in great part the recovery to John Johanson, a cook aboard the Kilburn, of a brand new suit of clothes.

Edward Wright, working his passage north from the South, believing the ship was to leave at 5:30 this morning for Portland, came ashore a few minutes previous to the time, bearing the stolen suit. He was found later in a front street rooming house, pleaded guilty before Judge Penneck and a few minutes later was on his way to Coquille to serve 20 days in jail.

Could Give No Reason Wright, who is a young man, pleaded guilty to the charge of petty larceny when brought into Justice Court. He could give no coherent reason for the theft.

The fog held on and the ship was delayed. This was something that Wright had failed to reckon with and thereby he was at fault. Chief Carter was called out of bed by the anxious cook and the resulting hunt soon brought to light the suit and the missing man.
