

Positive Proof

That Discount Sales Are Unfair and of No Benefit to the Customer.

Is it not true that when you go into a store to make a purchase and you are told that the article you desire is reduced in price, you immediately begin to examine it and wonder if it is inferior, defective or out of style? If you are a judge, you will finally come to that conclusion—which in nearly every case is true. No merchant can afford to, or is going to sell his goods without profit. He has either been dishonest by asking too great profit in the first place, he has marked the goods up then down again or there is some defect in the goods offered.

It is easy enough to buy (we will say) suits for $7.50, mark them to sell for $12.00, and later on reduce them to $10.00. It looks attractive, but it is unfair to the customer who bought early and paid the long price. With our system of strictly cash transactions and no reduction sales we mark the suit $10.00 and the price stays there.

The man who buys the first suit, early in the season, pays no more than the man who bought the last one, later on. Can we not well afford to do this and thus treat all customers alike?

Our New Mayor

One of the first requisites of a good Mayor is a man who exercises good judgment. At present writing there is a question whether Mr. Copple or Mr. Evertsen will be elected to this office, but both of these candidates have been selected by the people as men of good business judgment. As an evidence of this, one has already built in Perham Park and the other is negotiating for a home site in this attractive district.

WESTERNER AND HARDY CROSS IN THIS MORNING

Both Were Barbound Outside Since Thursday Evening—Daisy Putnam Races Before Gale

"We had plenty of ups and downs" is the way one of the crew of the steam schooner Westerner expressed the experience of the little vessel when she laid off the Coos Bay bar from Thursday night until this morning, waiting for a chance to cross in. With her, also from San Francisco, was the steam schooner Hardy. She too came in this morning.

Mariners who tossed about outside agree that it was the worst they have seen the Coos Bay bar in years. From the southwest came a heavy wind, bringing with it a sloppy southwest sea that kicked itself into all sorts of shapes. On top of this the vessels tried to ride. They did practically everything but stand on their heads.

Daisy Putnam Before It
And while these ships were waiting outside the Daisy Putnam, Captain Donaldson, was sighted and passed, on her way to Portland. Captain Donaldson on his arrival there said the wind at times blew 80 miles an hour, especially off Cape Blanco and Coos Bay.

However the wind added to the speed of the craft that at times reached off 13 and 14 knots an hour. While crossing into the Columbia the Daisy Putnam shipped a big sea, which smashed in a small section of the after rail.

WATERFRONT NEWS

KILBURN STILL OUT

Word was received today at the local office of the North Pacific Steamship Company that the F. A. Kilburn will leave Eureka this afternoon at 2 o'clock and should arrive at the bar early tomorrow morning. The vessel was due yesterday, but was barbound outside Eureka.

The steam schooner Westerner from San Francisco with freight, crossed in this morning after being barbound since Thursday night. She had a rather rough trip up the coast. It was rumored around this morning that the steamship George W. Elder, formerly on the Coos Bay run to Portland and Eureka, was waiting outside to come in. The report was erroneous, though the Elder passed outside. She had no intention of coming in. She is now on the Portland-San Francisco freight and passenger run.

At seven o'clock this morning the steam schooner Hardy, from San Francisco, crossed the bar after being held outside for 36 hours.

Adeline is Out

After being barbound inside since Wednesday afternoon the steamer Adeline Smith crossed out at 2:30 this afternoon and headed south for Oakland with her cargo of lumber and several passengers. The bar is reported much quieter today.
