Daigle in which about 60 couples participated and at the close of which programs were given out by the Misses Esther Sullivan and Jane McLain. The hostesses, Misses Mina Daigle, Gertrude Scaife and Lillian Thorwald proved to be fit rivals for the boys in their duties as floor managers. The masculine element was slightly in the majority, consequently some of the boys served as beautiful and artistic "wallflowers" during the evening, but despite this handicap everybody had a good time. The girls escorted the boys to and from the festivities and protected them valiantly from the dangers en route. Punch was served during the evening and Martin's orchestra helped make the occasion a gay one.

A MEMORY GAME

This is a game of memory, in which you pay forfeits for mistakes and also for laughing. The players sit in a circle. One begins by saying solemnly, "One old ox opening oysters." Everybody repeats this in turn. Then she begins again, "One old ox opening oysters, two tired turtles trotting to Trenton." This goes round the circle. The next repetition is: "One old ox opening oysters, two tired turtles trotting to Trenton, three tame tigers taking tea." This is repeated by each one, always beginning at "One old ox—" adding a new alliteration each time. Some examples are given, but it is more fun to make them up as you go along: "Four fat friars fishing for frogs." "Five fairies fighting furious fireflies." "Six soldiers shooting snipe." "Seven salmon sailing seaward." "Eight elegant engineers eating eggs." "Nine nimble noblemen nibbling nuts." "Ten tall tinkers tentatively tolling." "Eleven earnest emigrants eating early eggplants." "Twelve terrible talebearers telling truths."
