SNOW GENERAL

IN THE COUNTY

Storm Spreads Over Other Sections of Southwestern Part of the State

WORST FRESHET IN YEARS IS EXPECTED

Logging Operations At Powers Stopped and Woods are Dangerous for Men

FIVE FEET IN THE TIMBER

Trees Are Masses With Huge Snowflakes—Loss of Live Stock Will Be Great Because of the Lack of Feed on Hand

TWO INCHES OF SNOW HERE THIS MORNING

There was a good two inches of snow in Marshfield this morning and more fell during the day. Twelve inches on the level was reported at Powers and as much as five feet in some of the logging camps.

Snow continued to fall today throughout southwestern Oregon as well as at Coos Bay and it is feared that the new fall, combined with that already on the ground will result in freshets the like of which have not been seen in this county for years. Coquille Valley property owners are said to be facing damage to the amount of thousands of dollars if a Chinook wind would come to melt the snows of the mountains.

Stock Will Die

Meanwhile many of the stockmen in both Coos and Curry counties are without feed for their stock and in some places it is impossible to buy hay and also impossible to get hold of the cattle roaming through the hills. There is a possibility that the stock loss will be heavy among the owners of cattle who have not laid in a supply of grain and hay, and the number of men who forswear what was coming is said to be quite low.

Woods Are Dangerous

At Powers yesterday there was between nine and ten inches of snow on the level. In the camps it ranged up to four and five feet in depth. Logging is utterly impossible and probably will be for some days to come.

A. H. Powers has issued orders against any of the men going into the woods there. He says that the snow has pecked in gigantic balls on the limbs of the tall fir trees and men plodding beneath them are in danger of being killed.

No Logs Coming

In the meantime no logs are being brought to the C. A. Smith mill. Logging operations everywhere are at a halt. The camps on Coos River are closed on account of the snow.

Checked the Freshet

It is said that a severe freshet was well under way both on the Coquille and Coos rivers when this last storm and cold spell came in to freeze things tight again. It is when the weather moderates again that the greatest damage is feared.

Trainmen have expressed the fear that the Coquille will rise and cover the tracks, stopping train service to the Valley and to Powers.

Severe Last Night

Mr. Burton, formerly of the Busy Corner but now managing the Lockhart-Parsons Drug Store at Powers telephoned Frank Parsons this morning that there was about twelve inches of snow on the level at Powers. The snow there last night was the most severe of the season.

Bothers Loggers

Henry Hoeck was down from his South Coos River camp yesterday said that they had been closed down a few days on account of the snow, the company has quite a supply of logs ahead, probably having sufficient to supply both mills for a couple of weeks.
