JAMES CATCHING DIES AT HOME ON CATCHING INLET

Thirteen-Year-Old Son of J. W. Catching Succumbs to Disease Today—Second Son to Die

James Catching the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Catching of Catching Inlet, died at their home this morning of typhoid fever. He had been ill for some time.

This is the second death recently from typhoid and it is reported that there are several other cases of the disease in this vicinity and apprehension is felt lest it become more prevalent.

This is the second son that Mr. and Mrs. Catching have lost in the past year. Their oldest son was drowned several months ago and the loss of their last son today is a keen blow to them. Mrs. Tom Goodale of Marshfield is a sister of the deceased. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

MAY GET KINNEY TAXES STRAIGHTENED

County Court To Consider Matter Again March 20—Ask For Formal Petitions From Parties.

There is a possibility that the Kinney tax matters may be adjusted at the adjourned meeting of the Coos county court to be held on March 20. A delegation of representatives, before the court on Wednesday, met with no success, but the court asked them to submit formal petitions.

C. R. Peck represented the Port of Coos Bay; C. E. Mayhew, the city and school board of North Bend and John D. Goss, for Frank B. Waite. They wanted the court to lop off the penalties and take the back taxes and six per cent interest.

Mr. Goss said today that W. T. Dement is strongly in favor of the move, that Commissioner Armstrong said he might be favorably inclined if the petitions were presented while Judge Watson is decidedly against the move.

EUGENE TAX CASE

CITY SECURES INJUNCTION TO STOP ROAD LEVY.

Residents of Municipality Opposed to Paying For Improvement of Rural Highways.

EUGENE, Ore., March 3.—A temporary injunction was granted by Judge Skipworth in the circuit court restraining Sheriff J. C. Parker from collecting a two-mill road tax levied by the county count on property located in the cities of Eugene and Springfield. The city holds that the tax is illegal and that the country districts should stand the expense of road building. Pending a decision on the merits of the case the sheriff will collect two mills from the citizens of the cities, which it is claimed by the tax collector, will cost the county at least $1000, no matter which way the decision goes.

HOME IN A GARDEN

FLOWERS GROW IN PROFUSION IN YARD OF JENSEN.

Was Once An Uninteresting Hillside—Time, Thought and Work Accomplished Fine Results.

(Third of a series of "A City Beautiful" stories, by Clarence E. Ash.)

Several years ago Noris Jensen walked out onto the bluff beyond the end of what is now known as North Second street. He found himself on a steep sidehill and in a veritable forest. But through the trees he discovered a wonderful view of the bay and right there he decided to build him a home.

His friends laughed at him, tried to persuade him that he never would be comfortable there and that he was at the end of nowhere, with never a chance of "coming out of the brush."

Now Reaps Reward. But he was determined to build there. Men packed the lumber up the hill and a snug, homelike cottage was built. There were no electric lights there then, nor sewers and no city water. Today the home is a veritable garden spot and all the most modern conveniences of the city are his.

It would take only a brief visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jensen for one to see exactly what can be done toward converting an almost hopeless wilderness and waste into a garden of beautiful flowers.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Jensen will tell you it takes work, certainly it takes time and thought and care to accomplish these things, but that the reward they reap is worth many times over the time that they spend in their garden. And they will tell you, too, that the tired business man and the tired housewife are sweeter dispositioned people for having spent a bit of their spare time each day out in the yard with hoe and rake making the green things grow.

Flowers Are Everywhere. One enters their yard from Second street through a rustic gate to find the walk to the house lined on either side with dahlias, during their season. And to the right, the left and in front of them are flowers, a profusion of them and all sorts. There always seems to be something blooming in their yard. Right now there is a great tub of beautiful hyacinths and daffodils galore.

Anybody Can Do It. Anyone can go out into the worst front or back yard in the city with a rake and in a few minutes have an appetite, a pile of trash and cans and a much improved surroundings. Possibly there will be criticism of this statement. Good! Try it and find out for yourself.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES IN DAIRY FARMING

August Wolf Declares That Milch Cow Is Leader In Prosperity—Mixed Farms Are Best.

One of the cardinal truths emphasized at the first Northwest Dairy Show and convention in Spokane, February 24 to 26, is that the world's greatest economic problem leads to the farm, says August Wolf, in the March issue of Western Life Monthly. Grains and grasses, beef, pork and poultry and fruits and vegetables are the soil builders, the home builders, the town and city builders. More food-stuffs mean factories, more hay means livestock, which, in turn calls for packing plants; fruits and vegetables demand storage houses and canneries and creameries follow the milk cow.

Great areas of land throughout the Northwest, which once went begging for buyers at from 50 cents to $1.25 an acre, are now bearing enough foodstuffs to raise their value a hundred fold. The land was always worth a hundred times more than its selling price, but not to the man who did not or would not improve it. Today there is a new order of things—the farmer who wasted a dozen acres upon one steer, must hand that land over to the modern dairyman, who builds a site with his barn and makes the land support as many persons.

One of the world's foremost agricultural authorities says: "Mixed farming in this wonderful land of golden opportunities will mean an increase in rural population, smaller farms, better soil, larger acre yields, better homes and more contented people and will bring about a general improvement in agricultural, industrial and commercial conditions."

TOO MUCH BOOZE TO PROTECT LOONS

BIG SWEDE HELPS HIMSELF TO CUT OF CHEWING TOBACCO.

Arrested, Pleads Guilty to Being Drunk—Proves Source of Rum Was Legitimate One.

When John Rundel, or Suni, came into the store of Leonard Johnson, North Front street, last night at closing time, helped himself to a big cut of chewing tobacco and then refused to pay for it, Johnson naturally concluded the man was drunk. He called Officer Brockmuller and the arrest was made. This morning Rundel pleaded guilty to being drunk but steadfastly maintained that the liquor he drank was given him by a friend.

Chief Carter interrupted the proceedings long enough to go to the express office and ascertain that the friend, John Walke, had received yesterday two quarts of rum on the Yellowstone.

Rundel or Suni, he gave both names, was fined $5.00 and given a chance to go to the woods and make the amount, promising to return and pay Judge Butler some other day.

GAME WARDEN DECLARES OPEN SEASON TOMORROW ON SHAGS

Warns Hunters That Loons Are Scarce and Must Be Protected Under Federal Laws

"Shoot the shags, but save the loons," is the caution of Deputy Game Warden James Thomas in issuing his declaration of war against the winged pests that infest the lower bay and the lakes of the vicinity. The open season on shags begins tomorrow and will continue until July 1.

But there are only a few of the loons left on the Bay, says the deputy. These are of two species, the Pacific and the Great Northern Diver, and he wants them to be saved. Therefore the caution is issued to all hunters. Up Haynes Inlet there are hundreds of the shags, it is reported, and it is expected that dozens of hunters will be out on the waters after them. Many today are talking about trip to the lower bay to work on the live targets. The order allows them to hunt from motor boats.

The Federal laws protect all sorts of fowl, but in the case of shags an exception is to be made inasmuch as they have been found to be eating too many fish.
