UP-TO-DATE MATRIMONY

Lights turned low, they confess their romance. She says "Yes." Date is named, cards sent out. Soon they're in married bed. Friends all say: "Perfect match. She's a queen; he's a catch." Things all right for awhile. He's for clubs, she's for style. Chorus girl soon he sees. Sends her flowers, just to please. Wife finds out. Doesn't care; Goes on trip everywhere. Lawyer starts then, of course. Poor wife's suit for divorce. Husband fails to appear in the court. He's not near. Get divorce without flaw. They both yell: "Hip, Hurrah!" Alimony paid each week. Now they're friends, so to speak. —Selected.

PATIENCE is perhaps the virtue most necessary to human happiness. It is necessary in the relations between mother and child, between brother and sister, especially between husband and wife, between teacher and pupil, between friends and between employer and employee. The mother must have patience with the little mischievous pranks of her youngsters and the faults of her grown up children, or she will cause them and herself much sorrow from her bursts of temper. There must be mutual forbearance between brother and sister if happiness is to reign in the household.

Where is success for the teacher who has no patience? As one of the characters in a popular play tersely remarks, "It can't be done." Teaching to be successful must go hand in hand with patience. In fact, the average instructor needs more than his share of this invaluable virtue, for in a class of twenty pupils perhaps only one will have lively intelligence, ten will be densely stupid and the other nine will be between, not exactly stupid and certainly not noticeably intelligent. How trying, then, for a man or woman of ordinary brains to attempt to impart knowledge of which he or she is sure to students, who as a whole, either have not the desire or intelligence to grasp the lesson imparted.

Then think of the workers who have to break in new workers monthly or even daily. The impatient employer who snaps at his stenographer if her pencil point breaks and arouses the whole office staff to a state of fearful perturbation if one of its members happens to be late—such an employer may, and doubtless does, keep his employes jumping, but nevertheless his impatience is to his own disadvantage. By losing his temper over accidents or trifling, unimportant mistakes he often causes the dismissal of employes who are twice as capable and efficient as any successors he may later engage. The man who is patient with his workers, who realizes that they are human, not inanimate machines, and therefore liable to mistakes, obtains more satisfactory work than his competitor with the lively temper.

Particularly between husband and wife is patience necessary, for each has failings which the other must bear cheerfully and lovingly. "Bear and forbear" should be the motto of married life.
