MUCH ACCOMPLISHED CLEAN-UP DAY IN MARSHFIELD.

Bonfires Burned Until Late Last Night—Wagons Continue Gathering Up Rubbish Today.

Ringling praises for the work accomplished during Marshfield's first actual clean-up day are being heard on all sides today. A survey of the city shows that much was done yesterday and, if one has not made the survey to find out for himself, he has only to ask the fellows who worked and see their facial expressions of pain as they try to raise their arms this morning.

All Glad They Worked.

But there was not one of them that was sorry he worked. On the other hand, they seem mighty glad of it. Word from all the districts show that great quantities of rubbish and old logs went up in smoke. When George Rotnor found there were no teams volunteering to aid out in his district, he immediately went and commandeered an auto truck and all day long the "coal oil buggy" carried refuse.

Good Work Was Done.

With him were the efficient aides, Frank Horton and Dan Keating. The trio labored and toiled, pulled big logs to heaps where they could be burned and, not satisfied with that, they even went into a few back yards after rubbish. And they got it.

Notes On Cleanup.

Councilman Harry Kimball got the "bug." He donned his overalls and went to work in the lot, corner Second and Market avenue, and he stayed there until it looked a whole lot better than when he started.

C. R. Peck gained a reputation in southwest Marshfield as the "man who pulls down fences." He was in F. E. Allen's district and worked like a trooper all day. With him were W. A. Reid, Alva Doll and George Ayre. They did things out there.

A big barn near the Seventh street bridge was a poor landmark and the torch was applied. Several old fences went the same route.

Even City Attorney Brand was out toiling in his old clothes, to say nothing of Mayor R. A. Copple, who did valuable service in J. Albert Matson's district.

The boarders are Mrs. Wheeler's home on Third street, stopped long enough after dinner yesterday to prepare a garden for her in the front yard, the men and women doing the spading and raking. Miss Anne Volz inaugurated the idea and did her share, assisted by Dr. Leslie, Will Goodrum, Ben Fisher, J. T. Brand and others who were there.

HAS A BIRTHDAY

Capt. Robt. Dollar Is Seventy-three But Sturdy

Capt. Robert Dollar, who has extensive interests in Coos county, has just celebrated another birthday. A year or two ago he happened to be in Marshfield on his birthday and friends at that time remarked as to his wonderful preservation of health. He evidently is now quite as sturdy according to the following which appeared in the West Coast Lumberman of Seattle:

While in Seattle last week on a short business trip, Capt. Robert Dollar, of San Francisco, ship-owner and lumberman, celebrated his seventy-third birthday. A short time prior to that he was up in British Columbia looking over some timber. It required days of strenuous travel through the woods, roughing it in a very rough country. Ross Smith says Capt. Dollar was the only member of the expedition that was not thoroughly tired out at night and that he did not lag a moment during the day.

ABOUT BUEHNER DEAL

In connection with the purchase of the Simpson Lumber Company interests by Philip Buehner the Pioneer Western Lumberman of San Francisco says:

"Philip Buehner of Portland was a recent visitor here and definitely confirmed that the purchase of the Simpson mill and part of their timber in Coos county, Oregon, had been consummated, in behalf of himself, son Henry and son-in-law G. R. Sailor."

LUMBER PAPER DISCUSSES THE O. & C. LANDS.

West Coast Lumberman Gives Views Regarding Disposition of the Big Holdings.

Much has been said and printed about the disposition of the O. & C. grant lands which are now attracting much attention. The view of the lumber industry is of interest. The following on the subject appeared editorially in the West Coast Lumberman, of Seattle:

Congress, this session, must determine the final disposition of two million three hundred thousand acres of Oregon & California railway grant lands. The railroad company has equities which demand early adjustment. It is a big problem which may be solved either through private sales for speculative purposes; or allowing the government to carry the timber, marketing the stumpage as it may be required in lumber manufacture.

Careying Charge Big.

Present large timber holdings in Oregon and Washington were blocked in the fifteen years preceding 1910, and much of the capital invested was at rates of from six to ten per cent. As values on these purchases multiplied, the represented capitalization increased proportionately. The annual carrying charge now averages seven per cent on the first cost, with the result that a yearly carrying charge, compounded, doubles the cost of the investment every eight or ten years.

About the Profits.

Under these conditions profit in the lumber industry for the immediate future, and possibly for a long period, must come through improved methods of manufacture and better merchandising of the manufactured product, rather than through advancing stumpage values. The whole situation spells overproduction—unless there should be government regulation to prevent it, in the interest of conserving forest resources.

Capacity In Excess.

Today the saw mill capacity of the Pacific Northwest is fully thirty per cent in excess of output. On a rising market, such as the present, it is the natural tendency of operators to crowd capacity in an effort to liquidate expensive timber holdings. On a low market there always is wasteful utilization. Timber simply cannot be held in big blocks where capital demands an annual return of six per cent or over. All things considered, it therefore may be unwise to add this fifty billion feet of O. & C. grant timber to the burden which the industry now carries, for, without the requirement for immediate manufacture, the timber would be bid in at low prices for speculative purposes, accentuating the industrial instability of recent years.

Would Be Tie Up.

Such a sale also would tie up high priced capital in long term investment, simply the holding of a raw resource without development. The interest on such investment would represent a drain on the productive industries of Oregon. It therefore does seem reasonable that the O. & C. timber could be carried by the government, which has low interest rates at its command, until such time as it shall be required for manufacturing purposes.

ARE SEEKING ROAD REEDSPORT LIVELY

GARDINER BOUND TO HAVE A HIGHWAY TO PORTLAND.

Port Umpqua Courier Confident of Big Things for the Umpqua—New Jetty a Boost.

With the railroad a mile and a half away from them, the people of Gardiner are fighting hard to secure a county road to the station on the north side of the Umpqua, according to J. U. Austin, editor of the Umpqua Courier. He said only yesterday a deputation of citizen went out to Roseburg to ask the Douglas county court for aid.

New confidence has arisen on the Umpqua now that the $200,000 Jetty bond issue has passed and Mr. Austin believes that work will be well under way by the latter part of July.

As it is, the bar channel at the mouth of the river is constantly shifting. He said that at times it is 25 feet deep and then again a few hours later may be no more than 12 feet on the bar. With the jetty, it is believed a certain depth of water can be maintained. "And in the meantime," he added, "our hardest work is to keep Coos Bay from adopting the Umpqua country."

MAY HAVE BRICK YARD AT COUILLLE

New Industry Is Planned For the County Seat, Which May Be Enlarged.

Coquille is to have a new industry according to the following from the Herald of that place:

A new industry is being inaugurated on a small scale in this city that may easily grow into something important both to its owners and the community. Under the name of the Coquille Pressed Brick Manufacturing company, Chas. T. Ross and Ben Currey are making their final preparations for the manufacture of sand brick and expect to be in operation in a few days. They have already set up at the Collier warehouse a Helm Machine No. 8, which is designed to make the brick and subject them to a pressure of 80,000 pounds, which would seem enough to make them as solid as brick have any need to be. Some specimens now exhibited seem to be as compact and shapely as can be turned out, and are evidently superior to any that are brought in here.

GETS FULL TERM

Judge Harris' Successor Is For Six Years

SALEM, Ore., April 6.—The person elected circuit judge in the second judicial district next November will serve six years and not merely for the unexpired portion of the term of Lawrence T. Harris. Justice Harris was elected circuit judge in 1912, resigning in 1915 to go upon the supreme bench. G. F. Skipworth was appointed to serve in the second district until next election, as provided by law.

Doubt concerning the length of the term of the judge to be elected caused Secretary of State Olcott to ask the attorney general for an opinion which has been given.

The gravel used will be obtained at Bandon, while the cement must be imported. A supply of cement is already on hand, but the high water has delayed the securing of the gravel.

JUDGE G. F. SKIPWORTH HOLDS COURT SESSION AT COUILLLE

Kinney Tax Matter Up, Also Sneddon Case and Webster vs. First National Bank to Be Decided

(Special to The Times.) COUILLLE, Ore., April 6.—Three cases are before Judge Skipworth in the circuit court today for argument, though his stay here is to be a brief one as he expects to return to Eugene on Saturday morning.

The Kinney tax case is one of the most important matters up. The case has been on file since August, 1913, and it is expected this time it will be carried through to a decree, the county seeking to foreclose on the lands of the estate, and other properties more or less coordinated, for back taxes and penalties.

Waite Undecided

F. B. Waite said this morning that he had not yet decided about accepting the compromise offer of the county court, this body having agreed to throw off considerable to affect a settlement.

That there is a move on to dispose of the property, Mr. Waite admitted. Mr. Dennison Cook and John Rogers, of Oakland, were here last week and looked over the holdings, returning south on the last Adams.

Webster Case Up

The case of Alma Webster versus the First National Bank is also before Judge Skipworth, this being an action on the part of the plaintiff to secure title to four lots facing Front and Broadway streets and in the rear of the Marshfield Hardware company, now being in the possession of Stephen C. Rogers.

Again the case of Charles Sneddon versus Ellen Sneddon is before the court, the plaintiff seeking the recovery of property which he claims belongs to him and was given to his wife only in trust.
