"Why are you so stubborn, Barbara? she asked. "You have plenty of lovers." "I want, when I marry, a man who is brave, equal to any emergency. If I give up my liberty I want to be taken

"Silly child! What is the matter with big Barney, the blacksmith?" "He is big, but I never learned that he

What is the matter with Ernest, the gunsmith?" "He's as placid as goat's milk?" "There is little Fritz, the tanner; he is quarrelsome enough for you, surely?" "He is no bigger than a bantam cock. It is little he could do if the house wa set upon by robbers." That night Ernest, the gunsmith.

"You sent for me, Barbara," he said, going to the girl who stood upon the hearth coquettishly warming one pretty foot and then the other. "Yes, Ernest," she replied, "I've been thinking of what you said the other night when you were here." "Well, Barbara?" "I want to test you."

knocked early at the door.

"How?" "I want to see if you dare do a very disagreeable thing."

"What is it?" "There is an old coffin upstairs. It smells of mold. They say Redmond, the murderer, was buried in it; but the devil came for his body and left the coffin empty at the end of a week, and it was finally taken from the tomb. It is upstairs in the room my grandfather died in, and they say grandsire does not rest easy in his grave for some reason. though that I know nothing about Dare you make that coffin your bed to Ernest laughed. "Is that all? I will that, and sleep soundly. Why, pretty one, did you think I had weak nerves?" "Good night, then, I will send a lad to show you the chamber," said imperious Miss Barbara. Ernest turned straightway and followed the lad in waiting through dim rooms and passages, up echoing stairs, along narrow damp ways, where rats scuttled before them, to a low chamber. The boy looked pale and scared, and evi dently wanted to hurry away, but Ernest made him wait until he had taken a survey of the room by the aid of his It was very large and full of recesses, with high windows in them, which were barred across. So Barney was conducted to his post by the lad, who had been instructed in the secret, and whose involuntary stare at Ernest's placid face as it lay in the coffin was interpreted by Barney to be natural awe of a corpse. He took his seat, and the boy left him alone with the darkness, the rats and the coffin.

Spectacles in Art.

Among the figures forming part of the architectural decorations of the interior of the chapel of Henry VII is one of a saint reading a book and wearing a pair of spectacles without side strips, and of the form that used to be distinguished by the name goggles. Such early eye glasses were circular in form and were fixed in rims of leather, coanected by a waist or curved piece of the same material. Leather has elasticity enough to hold the glasses in position on the nose

Such a pair, probably not later than the time of Charles II of England, is preserved in the British museum. These leather rimmed goggles appear to have been succeeded by glasses of the same shape with rims of tortoise shell and a steel waist. An example of the early part of the last century, in the original black fishskin case, shows that there was difficulty in attaching the waist to the rim with the requisite firmness Hence arose the rims with a rigid waist and side pieces for keeping the spectacles in position.

But they were heavy and clumsy whether in tortoise shell or horn, and the difficulty remained of making a reli able hinge in such brittle material. Thi seems to have brought into existence the heavy gold, silver and steel speciacles of our grandfathers. - Jewelers

Seated together in a Broadway ca were five Chinamen, all chewing gum It was evidently their first experience with this deadly form of dissipation, but they were enjoying it immensely. They chewed and champed together and chattered away in their native tongue in the most animated fashion.

The other passengers in the car were much interested, and watched the mis guided Chinamen intently. The Ah Sins were as oblivious to the other passengers as if they were in the fantasy of an opium dream.

By their gestures and gibberish the made it plain to the spectators that the were discussing the deep mysteries of the slot machine from which they had extracted the gum. They also discussed the gum itself. They would hold it be-tween their teeth, stretch it out until it would break, thrust it back into their mouths, chewing and chattering all the

She Didn't Propose to Him.

One of the late matrimonial engage ments is said to be the outcome of a dar ing little piece of repartee on the part of the young woman, who has enjoyed the reputation of being not only a wit, but a beauty and belle as well. Although quite young, she was known to have de clined the honor of matrimonial alliance with several of the best so called "catches" of the season, and it began at last to be rumored that her mind and heart were set on one of her admirers who had not, as yet, the temerity to come to the point. However that may be, the young man in question was her partner in one of the Harvard assemblies during last winter, and during the inter-mission for supper was seated with her in a sequestered nook, "far from the madding crowd." Apropos of something that had been said, he asked her laughingly if the report were true that she had refused all the eligible men in her set. She blushed vividly for a moment, then suddenly face and said pointedly, "Yes, it is true -present company accepted!" It is, perhaps, needless to state that they remained in the "sequestered nook" during the rest of the german, and that the young lady wore a sparkling solitaire on her left hand within a few days. Rumor was overheard by one of the discarded suitors, who forthwith "gave it away."

WHERE BEGGARS THRIVE.

Mexican Poverty Extremely Picturesque "The d-l take you!" cried Barney to a Casual Observer

Chief among the many puzzling quesaway the weary half hour of a Sunday morning sermon, was the existence of beggars in Bible days. I pictured Pales-tine to myself as a land of temples, tombs and gardens, inhabited by beggars and Pharisees. Born and reared in the prosperous west, poverty such as the scriptural tales dimly suggested was to me a thing as vague as the Hell of the same records, a fairy tale far more unreal than the sleep-ing palace or the caves of Aladdin. Now, e puzzle is solved, I have seen poverty, have been to Mexico, I understand Palestine. I can almost believe in a horn-ed Satan and fire and brimstone.

To a casual observer Mexican poverty s extremely picturesque. It is not an mitation of respectability such as the humblest American will attempt, but it s humanity in rags and nakedness, too often in sores, almost always in dirt. There, begging is a trade, the occupation of all the poorer population. Beggars towns, and a motley array it is. They are of all sexes, conditions and ages, with and without sores, the lame, the halt, and Babies in arms holding out dirty little hands for a "centavo," old women, young women, healthy little boys, crippled grandfathers all whining to the same tune in their mongrel Spanish For the love of God, Senorita, give me

I hought out the porter, the newsdealer and the conductor to satisfy the want that never could be satissatisfy the want that never consist be satisfied; for there is a friendly feeling among these unfortunates, and when they find one who will give, they spread the glad tidings among all their class, and indeed I suspected them of having discovered is suspected them of having discovered in successful to the satisfied of the satisfied in another column by the Sherwood Hall Nursery Co. of Menlo Park and San Francisco, who are leaders on the coast in furnishing everything for the farm and garden. some peculiar way of telegraphing the in-formation to the next station, so besieged was I for charity.

Some tourists who had been in the country before endeavored to impress me with the fact that I was encouraging idle-ness, but who would not be idle when the un was hot and water a luxury and even for labor, money was not forthcoming. They must live. To live they must eat, and it seems to me that in the more desolate portion of the country, to eat, they

Very picturesque were they seen from the car window in the soft gloom of the southern night, their dark eyes gleaming like stars under their quaint hat or still more primitive head dress, their white teeth glittering as the musical Spanish rippled forth in compliments calculated to appeal to the generosity of the senorita who seemed to them a small sized Providence. In the cruel glare of the sun defects became evident, and one saw the coarseness in the squalor and dirt, still never did they cease to be poetic. They harmonized so perfectly with the back-ground of cloudless sky, antique buildings, and tropical verdure. There was a beauty even in their very ugliness which was a plea for their existence and in remembering the pleasantest journey of my life I shall always have a very tender recollection of the beggars of Mexico.— Edith M.
