Oregon Game and Fish Laws.

The last session of the Oregon legislature run mad on the subject of fish and game laws. After legislating upon every known variety of fish or game abounding in Oregon, they went to work and legislated upon some of them two or three times, and then wound up the whole thing by enacting a law creating the office of game inspector, with a salary of $2,000 per year and an additional $500 for traveling expenses. There is such a multiplicity of laws that the game protector has already declared that he is not able to obtain conviction under any of them, and the only part of the law which he now seeks to enforce is that part which provides for the payment of his salary in monthly payments.

The open seasons for this locality as far as we can determine from the fish and game laws are as follows: For any of the various kinds of wild ducks and geese, during November and December of each year; for any of the various kinds of trout, during September and October of each year; for elk, moose or moun. tain sheep, from the first day of August to the first day of December of each year; for any deer of any kind, from the first day of August to the 15th day of November; for any of the various pheasants, quail, bobwhite, jack snipe or prairie chicken, from October 15th to November 15th of each year.

Mr. Editor:—It appears, certain friends of Hamilton, Job & Co., do not like your criticism as to their method of doing business. Now it appears plain, why, at the meeting of creditors the business was rushed through and motion to adjourn brought out so suddenly. They wanted no debate. Their method of doing business must not be criticised. "What does the paltry sum of $200,000 of depositors money amount to? What if every man in Benton and Lincoln counties was broke up? Our methods must not be criticised. What do we care for your Agricultural College? We got your money, and what are you going to do about it? Look at the nice lot of assets we have left you. Of course we had to put in the bank building, store and drug store corner. Deduct this property from the others we gave in and what have you left? A few fern hills, called lots, and some sage brush land in Eastern Oregon. We also had to put in some good notes to make a showing, but see the nice lot of worthless ones. This is legitimate banking and must not be criticised. See how B. W. Johnson took the Oregonian to task, for a small criticism. This young man does not have to turn his lip over twice to see the fuz on it. He says everything they have done is legitimate banking. And so it would appear to an OUTSIDER.

An exchange says: "An editor works three hundred and sixty-five days in a year to get out fifty-two issues of his paper in good shape and on time; that's labor. Once in a while some one pays for a year's subscription, or a few copies, or an advertisement; that's capital. And often some son-of-a-gun of a dead-beat takes the paper for several years, and vanishes without leaving one cent for it or even leaving a lock of his hair; that's anarchy. But later on justice will reach the last named creature, for there is a place where he will get his just deserts; that's h—l."

The World's fair was visited by a most disastrous fire last Tuesday in which nearly, if not quite forty lives were lost. The fire devoured the cold storage building. The fire was so fierce and terrific that it is doubted if any of the bodies will be recovered.

It is stated that several people came over from Coquille City on the 4th to enjoy their first trip on a railroad. There are quite a number of people in this county who have never indulged in a ride upon a railroad. —Coast Mail.

Hon. Binger Herman's Visit.

The visit of our member of Congress to Yaquina Bay on a personal visit of observation, will in all probability, result in great good to the harbor and surrounding country. Mr. Herman expresses himself as greatly pleased at the result of the labor performed in improving the mouth of the harbor. He stated that when the work was first begun there was a mean low water of but seven feet on the bar. This has been deepened till it now has a depth of fourteen feet at the lowest water, and twenty-one feet at mean high water. This, Mr. Herman states, can be deepened to at least twenty-six feet at high water. This can be easily done. There is said to be yet four feet of sand in the bottom of the the channel and the balance of the the depth could be obtained by sub-marine blasting in the rock scarpment. Mr. Herman is quite enthusiastic over the harbor and stated that he intends to use his best efforts to get appropriations to complete the work as planned, and had but little doubt but that he would be able to convince the proper committee that it would be money well expended. It is his firm belief that the Yaquina harbor will soon admit the passage of the largest ocean vessels. In this connection we might say that this harbor is very fortunate in having so able a friend as Mr. Herman, and it is safe to rely upon the promises of future support made by him.

Every month the postoffices in all the country towns are flooded with price lists of Smith's Cash Store, of San Francisco, and it is presumed that they at least get trade enough to encourage them in sending their catalogues out. While we admit that every man has the right to buy wherever he pleases, still we think that it is a very poor policy to send money out of our own community to purchase anything that can be bought at home. And when everything is considered, we doubt, very much if they can buy any cheaper than at home. If those who send to Smith's store, would buy of their home merchants bills of the same size and pay cash before delivery as they do to other stores, they would find that there would be a material reduction in their home merchant's prices. Patronize your home people.

If you want to dehorn your cattle when they are calves caustic polish will do the job. A five cent stick will take the horns off from fifty calves, and prevent their growing. When the calf is a few days old, or when the horn can be felt, shear the hair off from around it, then dip the finger in water and wet the horn, now take the stick of polish, wrap a paper around one end so you can handle it without getting it on the fingers, rub the end of the stick of polish on the horn while it is wet and let the calf go and the job is done. The cows that were treated this way when calves have just as smooth heads as any mooley, not the least sign of a horn. —Tillamook Headlight.

A portion of Iowa was swept by another death dealing cyclone last week. The death roll was appalling.

Killed by a Log.

A very sad accident occurred on Drift Creek last Saturday morning, by which Ernest McGinley, a young man residing in that community lost his life. The deceased, in company with some other workmen, were at work on the county road sawing some logs. They were sawing one log which lay on top of two others, and Mr. McGinley went on the lower side of the log they were sawing and between the two logs it was on, to help saw. His companions remonstrated with him about going down, but he thought that he was safe. When the log was nearly off it suddenly gave way, and before he could escape the sawed end of the log struck him crushing him against one of lower logs, killing him instantly. His head and body were frightfully crushed, and he was caught in such a manner that his companions were compelled to saw a large log off before they could extricate him. He was interred at the Stearns cemetery on Sunday. The terrible accident has cast a gloom over that community, as the deceased was a highly respected young man.

The insurance companies operating in Oregon are raising a great kick over the law enacted by the last legislature providing that the amount of insurance written in the face of a policy should be the measure of loss sustained in case of fire, and in retaliation have raised their rates ten per cent. Upon what grounds of right or justice the insurance men seek to tear down the law cannot be known. While it is true that it may prove an incentive to over-insurance and through this to arson, still the policy is always written by an agent of the company insuring and it is supposed that the property has been inspected as to value, so that it is generally the cupidity of the company that over insures. The law is a good one and will stand.

According to the Florence West, the outlook is not exceedingly bright on the Sislaw at present. The government appropriation has been exhausted and work has stopped in consequence thereof. The saw mills have also shut down and there is but little to make the future seem bright to them.

An examination of the affairs of the suspended Linn County National bank is reported to show assets of the bank sufficient to pay the depositors and all other debts in full, and the stockholders the par value of their stock. —Salem Statesman.

The Independence base ball club of the valley league, has been transferred to Salem and will be known as the Salem club hereafter. The Independence people found out that it took a "right smart" money to keep up a team in the base ball league.

The Statesman editor is promised a new hat by one of the officials if the Oregon Pacific does not get over the Cascades this year. We would go bareheaded for a good while to see the consummation of this long wished for event. —Statesman.

Congressman Herman has already secured large appropriations for Yaquina harbor and he does not contemplate leaving his work uncompleted. He purposes having a harbor at Yaquina that any ocean vessel can come into without lightering.
