To all such who may chance to see this, we desire to say that one of the best duties a man can perform is to provide them with instructive and entertaining reading matter. It is knowledge alone, intelligence gained by the exchange of ideas, by contact of mind with mind, which raises man above the grade of an animal. UP DEPOT SLOUGH.

What a LEADER Reporter saw during an afternoon's jaunt.

Leaving Toledo Tuesday afternoon in the front seat of a one mare buggy, we drove out over the new road lately built by enterprising citizens of Toledo and vicinity, which intersects the old Corvallis and Newport road at what is known as the Dundon bridge. Here we found Father Dundon taking care of a large crop of hay. Mr. Dundon has lived for over a quarter of a century on the old homestead, and now when he is turning down the shady side of life he has a good comfortable home to live in and enjoy the fruits of years of honest toil.

Passing along the county road and by the large and thrifty looking orchard of Mr. Dundon we turned to the left, leaving the old Corvallis road, or sometimes called One Foot in Ten, by old settlers, and following up the winding valley of the Depot slough, we soon came to the old Hardison farm, now owned by the American Mortgage company, of Portland. Its broken down fences and fast decaying buildings makes one feel like he was going through a country graveyard. But we soon came to a more cheering scene, a half mile further on, at the fine farm of Wm. Enos, whom we found busy unloading the last load of hay from a large and well kept meadow. A half mile further on we passed by the old Bagley farm, now owned by C. W. Kurl, who by the way hasn't let any grass grow under his feet, having built many rods of good fence and otherwise improved his farm.

Resuming our journey we soon arrived at the bachelor farm of our old friend J. S. Copeland. Here we were also agreeably surprised at the many improvements that were under way. And hard by were Messrs. Croso and son, Tillotson brothers, Mathews and Ben. Jones assisted by six horses, several plows, scrapers, axes and grubbing hoes, they were making the dirt fly. Upon asking a leading question as to what was intended by this wholesale onslaught on the unoffending crabapples and willows, we were directly informed that a dyke 16 feet wide and four feet high was to be built from the Slough to the hill, a half mile away, to answer the double purpose of a dyke and also make a road bed for the Toledo Coal company, who will soon lay track thereon. Here we saw Mr. Crawford, the photographer of Albany, who was up the Valley for the double purpose of regaining lost health and to get a shot at some of the splendid scenery on the head waters of the Depot slough. Passing on up the valley we found the fine farm of Albert Waugh green with the growing crops. Here we saw eight acres of fine potatoes that in our judgement will bring in more shining shelles this fall than any one hundred and sixty acres of wheat in the Willamette valley. We must not forget to mention that we were entertained by R. F. Collamore, who has an adjoining farm to Mr. Waugh's, which, by the way, would make a Polk county hopking smile, for here on the bottom lands of the Depot is the hop-lands of Oregon. Passing on up the valley we passed by the splendid farms of Messrs. Harmon, Rader, Kyniston and Dick who are all making improvements this season. We also noted that on the left hand fork of the Depot that C. M. Carlson had made many substantial improvements during the last year.

Crossing over the peninsula to the Ollala, and striking it at the Wade farm, we now headed our mare for Toledo, a three mile drive down the valley of the Ollala. Passing by the splendid stock farms of Wade, Stanton, Hoffman and McCluskey who were all hard at work. In the way of improvements, we noted that Mr. Stanton had built a fine residence and otherwise beautified his farm. Mr. Hoffman has built a large barn. Johnny Steel has pruned his orchard and built an addition to his barn. Mr. McCluskey is reclaiming a large piece of swamp land and otherwise improving his valuable farm.

After a careful estimate of the bottom lands on the Depot and the Ollala, we are of the opinion that there is about 2,000 acres of rich bottom land suitable for hops, sugar beets or anything that will grow in an Oregon climate. Add to this the bottom lands along the Yaquina and its tributaries and the four thousand acres of rich tide lands and you have a total of about eight thousand acres of land, all on the water courses where its productions can be handled cheaply and easily.

We are glad to see the spirit of improvement reaching out over our county. For the trouble has been heretofore that we were all pregnant with the idea that we need not improve our lands, all that we had to do was to wait until the railroad was built, then sell our brush patches and decaying fences to some one who had more money than brains.

We have climate and soil; we have muscle and enterprise; we have one of the finest harbors on the coast; we have millions of feet of fine saw timber; we have mountains rich in rock and coal; we have fifty miles of coast line dented by four bays, along the ever green banks of which are yet many homes to be located. On two of these bays the escape of steam never wakened the echoes, or has the pioneer's ax struck the blow that has so often marked the pathway toward civilization. But ere the bells ring out the old year, the handiwork of man in his efforts to build him a home for his family, where God and nature has so richly provided the way, may yet be seen.

Hard times and railroad strikes we may read about but never realize if we but improve our lands and develop the many resources within the borders of our own county.

The Corvallis Times, in speaking of the Burleigh matter says:

"Yes, the Irishes, Samuel and Daisy, in spite of the fact that a little more than a year ago they were driven out of a house of ill fame they used to run in Corvallis, by a crowd of angry, disgusted citizens, have still the ear of the governor of Oregon and their story has more weight with him than does the decree of a righteous court and the verdict of twelve honorable jurymen. Sam is the same Sam that lived for more than a year with Daisy before he married her, living before and after the wedding on the fruits of the wretched traffic in human flesh she carried on. Daisy Irish, better known here as 'Big Six' has always been a notorious woman, a fact that under the common law is a strong circumstance pointing to her father's guilt in the case. Collectively they are a sweet-scented pair for the chief executive of a great state to hold up to his people as persons whose affidavits in the consideration of executive clemency are preferred to the solemn sentence of Judge Shattuck, or the sworn verdict of the twelve Lincoln county jurymen, whom it took but two minutes to agree that Burleigh was guilty. If it is to this class, the harlots and the leeches who feed on harlot traffic, that the governor turns for counsel, decent people who have been shamed, courts whose decrees have been outraged and juries whose verdicts have been insulted by the wholesale pardon of criminals need no longer wonder at the spectacle."

The Salem Statesman enthuses as follows, concerning the Oregon Pacific:

"A most brilliant future is staring the much abused Oregon Pacific in the face. This road will come out of the kinks yet, and with a return of 'good times' it will be extended over the mountains into Eastern Oregon and beyond. On the east it will have direct connection at Boise City with transcontinental lines. On the west ocean steamers will give it connection with coast ports and San Francisco. A line from near Stayton to Salem and on down the valley will give it connection with the great Central Willamette valley and Portland, and from Salem another line will be built with coast termini at Tillamook and Astoria."

The Oregon Senatorship.

Although the legislature will not meet for six months, there is considerable speculation as to the successor of Senator Dolph. The large republican majority assures the election of the man nominated at the republican caucus, even if a few should bolt. D. P. Thompson, who has made his lecture on Turkey a means of going about the state, would be acceptable to the silver men, as he is a prominent advocate of free coinage, but his personal characteristics do not win him many admirers or ardent supporters. Senator Corbett is credited with an ambition to end his days as United States senator, but he is equally objectionable to the silver men and his health is against him. Sol Hirsch has never lost sight of the office nor forgotten his defeat for which the mission to Turkey was not a sufficient recompense. Two younger and more active republicans are mentioned for the place, C. W. Fulton and Thomas H. Tongue. Both are extremely popular, able, energetic and gifted with the rare quality of doing things for others cheerfully and earnestly, and neither has established a financial record that is objectionable to the extremists on either side. There are no doubt others who will be mentioned or will keep their lightning rods in order. The situation is both interesting and perplexing.—Salem Statesman.

Among the replies received by the World to a request for views as to the Pullman strike, was the following from Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune:

"I believe that the result of this strike will be of great benefit to the country. It is like a thunder storm that suddenly sweeps up, purifies the atmosphere and results in a better supply of health giving ozone. It will result in congress devising laws whereby disputes between railroads and their employes will be harmoniously adjusted. I have great faith in the Anglo-Saxon race to govern themselves. The people have been asleep until awakened by this great economic earthquake. I believe that in twelve months we will have laws that will provide for the full settlement of future disorders. I think the contract system can be applied successfully by the railroads. Employes should be engaged under contract and hold their positions so long as they abide by the rules of the company and perform their duties faithfully. No man should be discharged without due notice, and no man should leave the company without serving notice. I endorse the scheme evolved by the huge brain of Bismark in the German empire.

The good advertiser is a much more valuable citizen than he gets credit for being. He is a pusher for trade. He recommends his wares not only to the citizens of his own city but to thousands outside of it. By bringing trade to his own house he increases the prosperity of all about him. More than that, he does much to favorably impress those who have occasion to patronize him. If a city has good advertisers it is generally understood that its people are active, energetic, prosperous, and if these people have these characteristics the city must also have them. This is an active generation and people like to go where there is activity. People have cause to know that activity follows advertising and the crowd always seeks what is best advertised, whether it be a private business or a community for that reason.—Tacoma Ledger.

The Elk City base ball team played Toledo on the 22nd. Score 28 to 17 in favor of Toledo. The boys report a grand time, and many thanks to Toledo club for their kindness, and will try and return the compliment on the 5th of August. And if possible change the score in favor of Elk City. The boys also return thanks to Mrs. Vincent for bread and honey. While she was very sweet, some of the boys doubt her age and think she is 28 instead of 16.

Arthur Rochester is a good umpire with equal rights to all.

O. C. Simpson, contractor on the mail route to Glen, has a petition to change the mail day on Saturday to Friday, and the schedule to leave Elk City at 7 a. m. This will be a benefit to all on the line, as mail coming in on Friday will not be held at this office until Monday, as it is now coming in on Saturday.

Dated July 24, 1894.

An auction at Pullman, Wash., last week, was brought to an untimely end by an incident out of the ordinary.

The auctioneer had just received an opening bid of $10 when the sobs of a woman interrupted proceedings. The wife of the man whose team was being sold under a mortgage, had risen from a sick bed, weak and scarcely able to stand, she forbade the sale. She said that her husband was away in the mountains when the horses were taken; that their crops must be cared for; that the horses were the only means of gaining a livelihood, and that the debt which the horses were being sold to satisfy, was already secured by a mortgage on this year's crop. Of course, the auctioneer and everybody else lost interest in the proceedings, and the sale was postponed. Meanwhile, some way will be found to avoid taking the horses from her.

On Monday C. G. Rawlings had Mr. Boyd, the photographer, to go up to Mrs. Simons' and take a group of five generations, such a group as one will hardly see in a life-time. They were all of the feminine gender, the eldest being 107 years old, while the youngest was three and a half months. The group consisted of Mrs. Simons, aged 107 years, Mrs. Joe Welt, aged 74 years, Mrs. J. H. Clelan, aged 44 years, Mrs. C. G. Rawlings, aged 20 years, and Mrs. Rawlings' baby, aged three and a half months. Whether it is on account of such a healthy country that members of this group have reached this age or not we are unable to say. But we do say that we will wager that a person will have to hunt a long time before they could find another such group.—Lebanon Express.

A word of warning might be in place to those who go fishing and hunting during the dry season.

The woods are full of decayed matter that is as dry as powder and will burn as readily, and the dropping of a match or the neglect of a camp fire might give birth of a forest fire that would not only destroy thousands of dollars worth of property, but would endanger and sacrifice life as well. There is a heavy penalty attached and persons identified as being responsible can be severely punished. Forest fires are now raging on the lower Columbia river.

Railroads carry a man from New York to San Francisco for $80; a hog weighing the same as a man is carried for $6; the advantage in favor of being a hog, $74.—Oakland Printer.
