George K. Holmes, the census expert, is the author of a recent paper entitled "A Decade of Mortgages," published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science. In this paper Mr. Holmes gives the results of the census investigation into mortgages and shows what conclusions can be drawn from these figures. That the real estate mortgage debt of the whole country amounts to $11,000,000,000 seems almost incredible.

We would respectfully refer the idea of establishing a daily evening paper in Oregon City, but has abandoned the project.

Oregon's Big Red Apple.

Among the many resources upon Oregon must rely for future prosperity there is none of more consequence, not even her gold and silver mines, than Oregon's big red apple. The importance of Oregon as a fruit growing state is not yet appreciated by her own people, but the time is close at hand when they will. It is becoming more and more apparent every day that we must give more attention to the development of our own resources and must rely more on local effort. We say it without intending to be offensive to any one that heretofore there has been too much of the practice here that was described by the Florida boy when a visitor asked him how they managed to live in that country. "On fish and strangers," was the curt reply of the youth. We have had too much speculation, too much lending of money at extortionate rates, and too many devices for making a living without earning it. Now we want to get down to good, honest work in developing the resources with which nature has so bountifully supplied our state.

And of all the Oregon products that will have a permanent and constantly growing value there is none of more importance than her big apple. It will be marketable when there is no demand for cereals, and when it will not even pay to raise wheat-fattened pork. Oregon is peculiarly the apple zone of the trans-Rocky mountain region. We grow other fruits, and fruits that never fail, but they are grown elsewhere on the Pacific coast. But Oregon has no rival territory in growing apples. And the apple is just as staple a product as the potato. There is always a demand for it, and it must be had regardless of the price. It is something that is always saleable in the home market, and almost every year there is a foreign demand for it on account of the failure of the apple crop in the Eastern states. Let us give the Oregon big red apple a boost.

A Portland firm of warrant brokers bought the greater part of the recent issue of county warrants for 92 cents on the dollar. This speaks volumes for the county. It indicates that as the resources and liabilities of Lincoln county become known, men of capital have confidence in it. A long step toward the placing of the county in a better condition, as far as the sale of her warrants are concerned, was the consummation of a complete settlement with Benton county, and cessation of all expensive litigation between them. It might now be said that Lincoln county now has her resources in sight. There is no uncertainty as to what she will or will not receive from Benton county. All delinquent taxes are due her, and thousands of dollars of them are collectable. And what is greater than all is that by the practice of prudent economy the amount of taxes actually collected exceeds the ordinary running expenses of the county. The result of this will soon be the redemption of every outstanding county warrant and the payment of warrants dollar for dollar by the county treasurer, when presented.

The secret service division of the treasury department has issued circular letters announcing two new counterfeit United States notes, one a $5 national bank note and the other a counterfeit $10 United States silver certificate. The national bank note counterfeit is on the Fifth National bank of Cincinnati, check "A," series of 1892, and is calculated to deceive those who do not give money careful scrutiny. The $10 silver certificate is of the series of 1886, check letter "A," and is a poorly executed photo-etched production, much of the wording is undecipherable, and the face of the note is blurred, while the shading around the letters is in black, instead of fine lines, and the note should be detected at a glance.

Bert Van Cleve contemplated the idea of establishing a daily evening paper in Oregon City, but has abandoned the project.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet and author, died at his home in Boston on Monday last at the advanced age of 80 years. He was the author of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," and many other works.

The Corvallis Gazette is making a very commendable fight for the building of a wagon road over the mountains from the Oregon Pacific front to Prineville by means of state aid. This project is a very feasible and just one, but cannot be accomplished, for the reason that it is too local in character.

Steamer traffic between Yaquina and San Francisco is getting quite lively. There are now three steamers plying regularly on the route, the Homer, the South Coast and Scotia, and all of them find plenty of freight to carry. This is quite a contrast to the situation of a year ago when the superb railroads, Hadley and Mulcahy, were busily employed in losing every bit of traffic the road ever had. In those dark days one steamer carried all the freight and then went half loaded much of the time.

Last Friday's O. P. freight met with quite an accident about four miles east of Toledo. A broken brake beam on the engine tender caused two cars to jump the track; and mixed things up generally. The track was pretty badly torn up and the freight and the regular passenger which was following, were delayed until about midnight. Bert Waugh, one of the freight brakemen, walked into Toledo and notified Agent Gaither of the wreck and the latter sent a message to Yaquina and an extra train with a wrecking crew were sent to the wreck. The passengers and mail were transferred and brought down. The cars derailed were flats loaded with stone from Pioneer, and the big, heavy stone made a bad mess to handle. Fortunately no one was hurt, but two bums who were stealing a ride seemed to think that the whole thing was arranged especially for them, and the way they departed from that region would have done credit to a Kansas Tornado.

Hardly a day passes but what we receive one or more letters from parties seeking information concerning the Siletz. The interest manifested by these parties indicate what a blessing it will be to Lincoln county when the reservation is finally opened.

The Alsea has also been having a big run of salmon, and Nice's cannery has about filled all its cans. Once or twice the cannery has received more fish than it could handle. The run has been all silver sides, very few chinook having come in this year.

A practical and industrious farmer and rancher of this county this week stated to us that, in his opinion, the greatest fault with the farmers and ranchers of Lincoln county was that they were trying to pursue lines of agriculture that were not suitable for this county.

At the recent meeting of the state editorial association it was decided to hold the next meeting at Newport, some time during the summer of 1895. The editors of Lincoln county must join with the people in making the occasion of their meeting an enjoyable one in every respect.

The Harrison saw mill at Waldport is running regularly and expects to run all winter. They are still sawing spruce lumber for the California market, and expect two lumber schooners up soon to take out cargoes. This industry proves quite a help for the Alsea county, and we are glad to see it keep going.

Chas. Sutton, a reservation Indian, better known as Prairie Charley, while returning from a trip to Cape Foulweather last Sunday was thrown from his horse between Beaver bridge and the Dundon bridge near this place, and suffered a severe fracture of the collar bone. He was found by the roadside by Bob Campbell and was brought to this place. A messenger was sent for Dr. Carter, who reduced the fracture and put the patient into proper shape and he was taken home on Monday.
