In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success. Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Street, Lynn, Mass.

This and many similar cures prove that

For Silver or Gold

What Tom Tongue Thought of Free Silver in 1894.

NOW IT'S "GOLD STANDARD."

Two years ago Tom Tongue did not have the nomination of any party for congress so he had an opinion of his own on the money question. It was a good one. Here it is:

Hillsboro, Or., Nov. 3, 1894.—

[To the Editor:]—I have read with some care your editorials in today's Oregonian, as well as the one of a few days ago, in which you depict the terrible consequences of either the free coinage of silver, or coinage of the product of our own mines.

It is to be inferred from these articles that the Oregonian favors the present coinage law of the United States, and is ready to wield its powerful influence in favor of their continuance. Let us look at those laws squarely and see what they are and where they are leading us. Heretofore our silver mines have been a vast source of wealth; they have furnished employment to thousands of men, who became consumers of the products of the labor of others, and have furnished a good share of the increased circulation needed by a constantly expanding population to do its increasing business. Nearly all of this has been overthrown by legislation in the last year. We have reached a condition unknown to our previous history. Our silver mines are absolutely worthless to us as producers of money metal. If run to their full capacity, not one ounce of their products could pass through the mints of the United States, or get into circulation among our citizens as money. Not a dollar of additional silver can get into circulation as money, except by redeeming a treasury note. When the silver is got out the treasury note is redeemed and destroyed, and the circulation remains the same. A vast amount of silver money is lost and destroyed every year by abrasion and by accident, and there is no way to supply the loss. Constantly increasing population demands increased silver circulation and the demand is ignored. On the contrary, as the population increases, the silver coin, by abrasion and destruction, constantly decreases. This will lead inevitably, if long continued, to gold monometalism. With tariff laws designed to increase our imports, while exports are diminishing enormously in value, the products of our gold mines, inadequate even to pay the interest on our public, private and corporate indebtedness to Europe, what will be the end? And where will the supply of money be obtained?

It is easy of comprehension why England the creditor nation of the world, should favor contraction of the world's money and a limitation of money metal. Having no silver mines of her own, and being a purchaser of both silver and food products, it is equally easy of comprehension why she should use every effort of diplomacy and legislation to diminish the value of both, but why the United States, a debtor nation, with extensive silver and vast stores of food products to sell, should voluntarily assist in carrying out the same policy, and diminish the value of her own resources, "passeth understanding." Unfortunately for the welfare of the country it contains too many people who, surrounded by huge blocks of well secured, interest bearing obligations, are interested in legislation that makes money dear, and everything else cheap; who, not engaged in productive industries themselves, are anxious to secure the product of the toil of others at the least possible outlay. Unfortunately, also in these "evil days" that have befallen us, these men are powerful in taking lessons of a hard schoolmaster and are acquiring some valuable experience. This is about the only valuable thing we are acquiring. When the change comes, and when the American producers supplying the American markets when we cease to buy of Europe what we can buy of ourselves, the same beneficial legislation that brings about this result, applied to our silver mines, will make of them hives of industry, fill them with an army of men who will purchase supplies at fair prices, from men who are now standing idle, while their families are hungry. As business and population expand, our monetary needs will be constantly supplied from silver mines on American soil, owned by American citizens, worked by American miners, who in turn supply their needs from the production of other American workmen. How this result, if accomplished, placing in circulation the entire product of our silver mines, not needed for other uses, and will not exceed probably 50 cents per capita, will disturb business or commerce or prove detrimental to our financial system, I am at loss to see.

In this contest it is greatly to be regretted that the Oregonian, right upon so many questions, should, in the opinion of many of its staunchest friends, be wrong upon this, should throw the vast weight of its vast influence upon the hand that, while oppressing other people, bears with equal hardship upon the proprietors of the Oregonian. The heart of the editor is generally in the right place and sympathizes with those who are wronged and oppressed, and it ought to be so in this matter. With the Oregonian on the right side of this question, this entire west would present a solid front against those who are doing us financial wrong and laying weary burdens upon those least able to bear them.

The McKinley club of Newport had a red-hot debate at its last meeting as to the advisability of putting Binger Hermann's name on their tickets next June, whether or no. We understand that the club finally adjourned without decisive action in the matter.
