THE SMALL FARMER.

On the small farm avenues are open to the owner which are practically closed to the large farmer. He is not crowded with work, he can look more into the details of his business, can pay more attention to the marketing of his produce, and, in short, can farm more closely in every way. He can feed all he raises; in selling he comes in closer contact with the consumer, and he can afford to look after the little odds and ends which are so often wasted.—Exchange.

Endorsing the above we would add: Lincoln county is especially adapted to the small farmer. Nature has subdivided the arable land into small tracts, these are extremely fertile and surrounded by vast stretches of hill range where cattle, sheep and goats can find excellent pasture.

Once upon a time Thos. H. Tongue, who is now a gold bug, was interested in defeating Mr. Dolph for the senatorship, he published a letter in the Oregonian, against gold and contracted currency, from which the following is an extract:

"A continuance of this legislation means constant contraction. Scarce money means dear money, with increased purchasing power; it means a decrease in the price of every other species of property real and personal in the country and in city; it means decrease in the wages of all classes of labor skilled and unskilled, manual and professional. But worst of all it means an enormous increase in indebtedness of every class, public and private, with diminished power to pay. It means confiscation of the property of the debtor, for the benefit of the creditors."—Roseburg Review.

A Town With a Prospect.

Among the many desirable points for the investment of capital and the selection of homes in Lincoln County, Elk City presents some claims of special value. Located at the junction of the Yaquina and Big Elk rivers, with a splendid site for a commercial and residence town, commanding the trade of two valleys with pure air and water and a fertile soil, she has all the natural and commercial advantages necessary for the building and support of a thrifty business town. For the next five or six years she will reap largely of the benefits arising from the improvement of the Yaquina harbor. All the stone used in the construction of the jetties will be quarried at that point. Prospective bidders on the government contract have secured options on all the quarries that can be reached by barges. Samples of the stone from these quarries have been tested by the government engineers and pronounced firstclass for jetty purposes. A large force of men will be in constant employment and large sums of money will be expended there. This will create and sustain a large volume of trade, and also make a good market for all the produce in that vicinity. Home seekers can find desirable farms in that section at moderate cost. There is no better grazing land in Oregon than on the upper bay. Cattle run on the open range the year round without being fed and come out in the spring in fine condition. The hills between there and the coast break the force of the winter storms; and all the land being above tidewater, stock are subject to the chill of wind and water as upon the lower bay. Among the permanent industries which hereafter will form an important factor in the prosperity of Elk City, the quarrying of commercial sand stone undoubtedly ranks first. No better building stone is to be found on the coast, and most of this stone can be loaded from the quarries onto the barges, greatly reducing the cost of transportation. The Pioneer Sand Stone Co. have one of the best equipped plants in Oregon and an inexhaustible supply of rock. Rochester, Curry and Kauke are just opening up the Bevins' quarry with some superior ledges of colored stone. With these advantages, Elk City will be right in the swim for the next half dozen years.

POOR SPAIN.

When Brother Mathews of the News, in his discussion of the Spanish question last week, struck a theatrical attitude and yelled "Sic semper tyrannis," we knew that the jig was up with Spain. If Spain should die from the effect of this relentless blow, and we have no doubt but that she will, we think that her executor may have an action against the News.
