"Why Women Cannot Sleep."

The highly organized, finely-strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which is necessary for happy womanhood is only possible when the sensitive feminine organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any weakness or derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health, nervous vigor and capability as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription" invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. It purifies, heals and strengthens; insures functional regularity; provides physical reinforcement and sustaining power at periods of special weakness and depression.

It is the only medicine which makes the coming of baby safe and comparatively easy. In a personal letter to Dr. Pierce, Mrs. Marguerite Collin, of Cutler, Algoma Co., Ont., says:

"I was a sufferer and was cured by Dr. Pierce's wonderful medicine. When I commenced the medicine I could neither eat nor sleep. My hands and feet were constantly cold; I had a wasting, troublesome drain for three months and my monthly periods were never regular. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me. I feel well. I thank the World's Dispensary Medical Association."

Official County Paper.

EDITORIAL.

But few people would kick at the weather this week.

We are glad to see many news correspondents appear. Their items always assist in making a live paper.

The clerk hire of the committees of the house was $206 per day during the extra session. The senate committee clerks received $3,683 or over $184 per day. Clerks for the legislature at $390 per day we suppose are necessary, but much work can be done for that money.

The wife of our governor-elect died very suddenly at Omaha last week Thursday night. The remains were brought to Salem and interred at Macleay Sunday. Mr. Geer's many friends in this vicinity will sincerely sympathize with him in his loss of a loyal wife and loving mother.

Five thousand cases of salmon could have been put up in a cannery situated here this year just as well as not. Several thousand dollars could have been distributed among our fishermen and a neat little margin would have been left for the cannery. Toledo people should erect and equip such a cannery and to the fish department add fruit canning machinery. Such a combination at Toledo would prove a financial success.

In other columns will be found two communications, one from Mr. Zeigler at Kernville, and one from Jack Allphin of this place. The former does not seem to think Toledo ought to work for roads leading to her streets and business houses but ought to assist other places. Toledo finds no fault with Kernville for building a road to Newport. That is their business. To look out and build one to Toledo is our business, and both should be heartily endorsed by all Kernville people. There is also a way to secure the county aid and legal tender so short in Kernville. Mr. Allphin speaks of his democratic principles in no misleading manner, using very forceful English, but that is Jack's well known way. He wants no misunderstanding.

The Eugene Guard upholds Gov. Tanner for not sending troops to protect miners at Virden and says further: "If other governors had used the same method in dealing with labor troubles, loss of life would have been averted and present relations between employer and employe would be more satisfactory." Yes, all white miners would be killed, then relations would be more quiet and peaceful. Because Gov. Tanner refused to send aid, there are eight more homes despondent and ten where pain and discouragement sit above the mantel. No matter whether the mine-owners or the miners were wrong. Gov. Tanner was surely wrong in not being there to protect life when fully notified that trouble would ensue. In all these labor troubles no one knows who will fire the first shot and that governor is wrong who fails to respond when asked and fully warned of what is to come to pass. So it looks to us.

Oregon Hemp.

One of the least attractive but nevertheless most interesting and valuable exhibits of Oregon's natural resources at the exposition, which escapes the attention of many of its visitors, is that of Oregon-grown Japanese hemp, cannabis sativa Japonica, a product that for the Webfoot state bears immense possibilities.

The fact that the United States for a series of years imported from foreign countries vegetable fibers to the fabulous amount of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 per annum, a great part of which could profitably be cultivated in this country, draws the serious attention of our national department of agriculture and of farsighted and enterprising citizens to these products of foreign soils; and many have been the trials with fibrous plants during the last 15 or 20 years, in nearly every state of the Union, foremost among these plants being the genuine hemp, cannabis sativa.

Attracted by the favorable reports in regard to the culture of this useful growth in our neighboring state of California, and the preparation of its valuable fibers by newly invented American machines, which in respect to efficiency, simplicity and perfect work, eclipse all similar English, French and German devices, two of our progressive citizens, Messrs. Charles E. Ladd, banker, and S. M. Mears, president of the Portland cordage works, concluded to try this important agricultural industry, as also the technical industries indispensable for the preparation of the fibrous material.

At heavy expense quantities of acclimated seeds were procured, the co-operation of an expert in this peculiar branch of human activity was secured, and several decorticating and accessory machines constructed in this very city of Portland. The seeds were distributed gratis among the thrifty farmers of Oregon and Washington with the necessary instructions in regard to culture, and the appointed superintendent took great pains in visiting repeatedly the different fields, lending his helping hand to the farmers and doing much for the attainment of that grand success which is now given ocular demonstration at the exposition.

From the experiences gathered this season by practical experiments, every doubt about any possible unfavored climatical conditions in Oregon has been eliminated, and wherever low river or tideland can be found, such as keeps the moisture during the growing period, when the plant is absorbing large quantities of water, the profitable growth of this genuine hemp can in advance be considered an assured fact.

The counties of Multnomah, Yamhill, Benton and Lincoln, indeed, are to be congratulated on account of having in their midst such enterprising farmers, who by their untiring and intelligently conducted efforts have, during one single season, fully demonstrated that Oregon's soil and climate are splendidly adapted to a most valuable industry, which, no doubt, is destined in the near future to attain great importance in the political economy of the Webfoot state, by diversifying her agricultural pursuits, and consequently developing large technical industries, which will bring fair wages to thousands of willing hands, thus developing unlimited resources to our posterity for centuries to come.

Farmers visiting the exposition are cordially invited to inspect these hemp exhibits, which, by close investigation, will prove as interesting as instructive, since not only the agricultural product, the stems, are displayed, but also decorticated ribbons and reeled fibers, ready for the spinning frame of the Portland Cordage Co. Those are the mute testimonial of progressive science and of valuable effect of intelligently applied technics.

Fiber Expert Felix Fremerey, this city, who has been entrusted with the superintendence of the culture proper and with the preparation of the fibers during this season; has already had offers from several farmers of this state who were successful this summer, and who are planning now for the culture of Oregon hemp on such an extensive scale as to at least provide for local wants during the coming season. They have in view also the exporting of quantities of the prepared fiber to our Eastern states and to European countries ere many years have gone.

Any application to Mr. Fremerey for information in regard to hemp culture and the profits to be derived from it in Oregon and Washington will meet with prompt attention, free of charge.—Oregonian.

How to Prevent Croup.

We have to children who are subject to attack of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by O. O. Krogstad, druggist.
