MRS. PINKHAM'S ADVICE.

What Mrs. Nell Hurst has to Say About It.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you I had not been well for five years; had doctored all the time but got no better. I had womb trouble very bad. My womb pressed backward, causing pain. I was in such misery I could scarcely walk across the floor. Menstruation was irregular and too profuse, was also troubled with leucorrhoea. I had given up all hopes of getting well; everybody thought I had consumption. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I felt very much better and was able to do nearly all my own work. I continued the use of your medicine, and feel that I owe my recovery to you. I cannot thank you enough for your advice and your wonderful medicine. Any one doubting my statement may write to me and I will gladly answer all inquiries.—Mrs. NELL HURST, Deepwater, Me.

Letters like the foregoing, constantly being received, contribute not a little to the satisfaction felt by Mrs. Pinkham that her medicine and counsel are assisting women to bear their heavy burdens.

Mrs. Pinkham addresses Lynn, Mass. All suffering women are invited to write to her for advice, which will be given without charge. It is an experienced woman's advice to women.

TAKEN FOR A LEGER.

WAS KEPT IN CONFINEMENT FOR SEVEN YEARS.

John Anderson Taken from His Home and Imprisoned Alone on the Island that He Had Conquered—Story of His Unique Case.

After being buried for seven years from the eyes of the world, consigned to a hotel in solitary confinement, fed from a trough into which his meals were dumped, and seldom spoken to by a human being, John Anderson, the leper of Lima, Peru, has at last been given his freedom.

ANDERSON.

While the hearts of all Americans have been wrung with sympathy for the barbarous treatment of Dreyfus and his isolation on Devil's Island, there has been within a few miles of Philadelphia a human being deprived of his liberty, of association with his fellow men, treated like a wild beast, and buried in a living tomb.

In all these years he has not touched the hand of a human being nor heard a voice save the occasional shout of the person passing his prison. As a consequence of his isolation, he has grown to be more of a savage than a human being.

Anderson, who is about 40 years of age, is a mechanic. For years he was employed in Bonelli's shipyard, at Chester. About seven years ago he was taken ill in his boarding house with a peculiar malady, which the attendant physician was at a loss to diagnose. Another physician was called in who, in turn, summoned others, and after a consultation pronounced Anderson a leper. The authorities were notified and immediate steps taken to place him in solitary confinement. He was taken small porch, the favorite spot of Anderson.

So fearful have the authorities and attendants been of the dreaded disease that the ashes from the stove created by the fuel hurled by Anderson have never been moved from outside the house in the seven years he has been under their charge, and to-day form a mound many feet high. Nothing the house nor the porch nor the steps have been swept or cleaned, and this length of time.

At first of a Human Voice. The other day a reporter called upon Anderson to tell him that he was to be released. As he opened the door he was greeted with a gust of air which for faintness beggars description. Entering the room, which was in semi-darkness, he opened a shutter to admit the light, and the scene that met his gaze was more revolting than the air that met his nostrils. The room was unoccupied. The floor was greasy, covered with dirt and filth. In one corner of the room an old comfortable stuffed with cotton, almost torn into shreds, marked the place where the alleged leper spent his nights. The scrub wooden table on which were some rust-covered tin dishes; an old chair, and an old iron barrel stove completed the furnishing of the room. The visitor entered another room and the sound of his footsteps broke the silence he heard a startled movement in the far end, and the next minute a voice exclaimed: "Go away! Go away, in God's name. What do you want with me? Leave me alone to die!" Assured that no harm was to come to him, Anderson was persuaded to come into the next room.

Aside from a pallor acquired by long confinement there is no unusual discoloring of the skin. There are no blotches or scales, which are the pronounced symptoms of leprosy, on his hands, face or neck, nor are the finger nails discolored or decayed. When informed that the grand jury had decided that he was not a victim of leprosy and that the State contemplated sending him back to Sweden, Anderson said: "I have no desire to go anywhere. For years I have been hunted and persecuted like a wild beast. I was taken forcibly from my home, brought here, chained to the floor. I became convinced there was no hope, no future—nothing but death before me. For seven years I have lived here alone and the sight of man, the sound of the human voice and the customs of the people with whom I was formerly associated are so entirely unfamiliar to me now that it would be like beginning life anew. I have been branded as a leper, whom all my fellow beings have been warned to shun. My name has become a byword, my alleged affliction so well known that it would be impossible to cultivate acquaintances anew. If I were given my liberty I would be without home, without friends and unable to secure employment. It is best that I stay where I am until help comes."

Spiders Ship Made Balloons. In the professional school at Chislewood, the Institute Textile states that spiders have now to spin for the benefit of the balloons which are used for scientific and military purposes. The spiders are grouped in dozens before a reel which withdraws the delicate threads. One spider can give a thread from twenty to forty yards in length, after which performance it is dismissed. The threads are of pinkish hue, and are washed to remove the sticky surface layer. Eight threads have to be combined. The resulting texture is much lighter than ordinary silk of the same bulk, and strong cords for military balloons can no doubt be obtained in this way.

Typewriters Invented 1855 Years Ago. It is generally supposed that the typewriting machine is quite a modern invention, but there is a record in the archives of the English patent office for 1778 of an application for a patent for such a machine. Exactly 100 years later the firm of Bull & Wright applied for a similar grant and the construction of their machine afforded a basis that enabled a Mr. Thurber at Worcester to improve the system. In the year 1832 a Frenchman named Poncelet obtained an English patent for a very ingeniously constructed writing machine, which was shown in the great exhibition of the same year and created no small sensation.

It's pretty hard to make a schoolboy believe in an all-wise Providence when it rains on a holiday.
